Franco Rips Into Madrid; Plane Fleets Sweep Coast

Fierce Battle Rages Mile and Half From Center of Old Capital.

Air Bombs Kill 15 In Anarchist Town

Loyalists Attack Desperately to Recover Power Centers.

World Relations.

Insurgent troops thrust to within a mile and a half of the center of Madrid, in the farthest advance into the Loyalist-held metropolis since November, 1936.

Franco-Italian conversations directed toward re-establishment of friendship were to open in Rome today as Mussolini reiterated Italy's readiness to defend her empire. Page 6.

The Senate passed and sent to the White House the $546,866,000 regular Navy appropriation bill, then resumed its debate on the Navy expansion measure. Senator Vandenberg joined Senator Nye in attacking the plan. Page 3.

Rebels Enter Madrid.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, April 21.—Insurgent troops, striking from the ruins of the University City suburbs, were reported tonight to have driven to within a mile and a half of the center of Madrid after slicing loyalist advance lines on the outskirts.

The insurgents, attacking from the northwest through once-beautiful West Park, swept along the Paseo de Rosales to a point beyond the monument to the "Martires de la Patria," who fell in Cuba during the Spanish-American War.

The thrust carried Gen. Franco's troops farther into the loyalist-held metropolis than they have been at any time since November 15, 1936, when they reached University City and were halted by the stubborn resistance of the international brigades.

Fort Bars Advance.

At the West Park monument the insurgents were only a mile and a half from the Puerto del Sol, the "Times Square" of Madrid, but there remained the Montana Barracks—converted into a fort during the last 14 months—to impede Franco's drive into the city.

Up and down the Mediterranean coast fleets of insurgent bombing planes ranged—on both sides of Franco's 40-mile coastal strip splitting loyalist Spain in half—and rained bombs on loyalist towns.

Determined to sever Catalonia from France and cut off escape across the Pyrenees mountains, the insurgent planes swerved inland and bombed the anarchist loyalist brigade headquarters at Puigcerda on the Franco-Spanish frontier. The railroad station was destroyed and the bombers swerved eastward, ripping up 10 miles of railroad track with demolition bombs in the direction of Barcelona.

Fifteen persons were killed in the Puigcerda air raid.

While heavy fighting raged on Madrid's northwestern outskirts the loyalists admitted the enemy was exerting heavy pressure around Madrid and along the 135-mile Catalan front, particularly south of Tarragona and in the Tortosa and Benicarlo sectors where loyalist foreign brigades resisted desperately.

The insurgent penetration along the Paseo De Rosales at Madrid was described by the insurgent radio station, Radio Nacional, on the Madrid front, as a counterattack in answer to several loyalist "test sorties" under Gen. Jose Miaja, now President Reminds Daughters That He and They Are Descended From Immigrants and Revolutionists.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

President Roosevelt amiably reminded the Daughters of American Revolution yesterday that their ancestors were "immigrants and revolutionists" and admonished them to teach the youth of the country why those ancestors threw off a "Fascist yoke."

He apologized for appearing at their forty-seventh Continental Congress at Constitutional Hall in a business suit.

The President's visit to the Congress—the first in his administration—came at the afternoon session following the business meeting in the morning at which the body adopted a resolution indorsing his naval expansion program.

"We have a great many things to do," he declared. "Among other things in this troubled world is the need of being very, very certain that no matter what happens, the

Bill Launched On 14th Street Span, Tunnels

House Asked to Authorize Commission to Study Practicality, Cost.

The first step toward constructing a boulevard-type bridge built on tunnels to replace the present Highway Bridge connecting lower Fourteenth street with the Alexandria pike was taken yesterday by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia.

Smith introduced in the House a bill to set up a commission to make a study of the "practicability and approximate cost" of the project and report its findings and recommendations to Congress by December 15.

The measure suggested that the investigators work out a scheme of running the railway tracks now carried on the railway bridge through a tunnel beneath the highway span. Another tunnel was proposed for use of trucks and commercial vehicles.

"The traffic congestion on Highway Bridge is becoming worse

Coogan Tale of Aid To Mother Denied

Los Angeles, April 21 (AP).—The story that Jackie Coogan saved his mother, Mrs. Arthur L. Bernstein, from being put out of her home, sounded good, her lawyer, Charles Katz, said today, "but it was to arouse sympathy for Jackie and ill-feeling toward the Bernsteins."

"The story is untrue," said Katz. "His attorneys and I stipulated that the receiver should not take possession of the property."

Relief-Rebuilt Shrine Called Historical Lie

Dr. Holland Cites Instance of 'Falsification' in Relief Project.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Orleans, April 21.—Hasty restoration of American historical shrines with relief money has resulted, in at least one instance, in "historical falsification," Dr. Leicester B. Holland, chief of the Fine Arts Division of the Library of Congress, today reported to the American Institute of Architects at its seventeenth convention here.

The institute's committee on the preservation of historical buildings, of which Dr. Holland is chairman, recommended that relief allocations for restoration projects be withheld until the plans have been approved by "recognized" experts on United States history and architecture.

Hero Worship Blamed.

Popular interest in Colonial architecture and "the American capacity for hero worship" were blamed in the report for attempts to restore shrines without sufficient facts about the originals.

Dr. Holland's report hit at two projects in Philadelphia. The first, which has been completed, restored the interior of the Congress room in old Congress Hall, one of the buildings of the Independence Hall group. The report said this project "is open to serious criticism on the score of historical accuracy."

The report also attacked a project to rebuild the house of William Penn, at Tullytown, near Philadelphia, for which the committee said

War Veteran Hangs Himself At Shrine in Monastery Here

Before a shrine in the Franciscan Monastery garden, while the monks were chanting their evening prayer nearby, a 42-year-old World War veteran hanged himself last night.

He was Thomas A. Holden, assistant field examiner for the District Unemployment Compensation Commission and father of six sons, the oldest still in his early teens.

His body was found when a monk struck a match to show the interior to visitors.

Holden hanged himself with his leather belt to the iron grillwork that separates the altar from the rest of the chapel. Because the spike was not high enough, he had to lean against the noose to kill himself.

The flickering matchlight showed the chapel bare except for four small kneeling benches, two on each side. There was no decoration on the arching walls, but above the altar there was a painting of Christ on the Cross. And before the altar, bowed grotesquely, was the figure of a man who had become weary of life and sought peace.

While physicians and the Fire Rescue Squad were summoned, monks attempted to revive the man with artificial respiration. A priest anointed Holden's head with holy

Chinese Flee In Shantung, Japanese Say

Two Strongholds Taken, Great Drive Moves Toward Suchow.

Chiang Denies Retreat, Says Troops Still Encircle Lini.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Friday), April 22.—A Japanese army spokesman said today that reinforced Nipponese columns were driving southward from Lini, in southwestern Shantung Province, and soon would be in position to jeopardize the strong Chinese positions in Suchow, one of the key cities in Chiang Kai-shek's strongly fortified Lunghai railway line defending his provisional capital in Hankow.

"Our forces are making good progress despite sporadic Chinese rearguard resistance," the spokesman said. "The Chinese have started a general withdrawal in the Lini sector, but are holding their lines elsewhere on the Shantung front, including points south of Yihsien and Hanchwang."

The Chinese war office spokesman said in Hankow that Gen. Li Tsung-jen's advance units "were drawing up new lines south of Lini" and that "our columns still hold a semicircle around that city in positions similar to those which preceded our capture of Taierhchwang."

Drive Intensified.

Advices from foreign military observers at the front indicated that the Japanese offensive throughout Shantung had been intensified following the Japanese occupation of Lini and their recapture of Hanchwang.

"There are some indications of a revival of the former Japanese drive northward from Pukow (southern terminus of the Tientsin-Pukow railway opposite Nanking), which would mean that the Japanese 'big push' on the Chinese Lunghai line has started," one dispatch reported.

"If a general Japanese attack has started it is believed the Japanese objective for the present merely is to smash the Lunghai line at its eastern end and then open a new peace offensive without attempting a costly drive on Hankow."

Military attaches and diplomats generally, however, believed there was no possibility that Chiang would consider an armistice as long as he controls the Hankow area—traditional military heart of China.

New 'Rest Period.'

Most experts believed the capture of Suchow would be followed by a new "rest period" during which the Japanese would consolidate territories administered by their Peiping and Nanking governments.

Some experts thought Premier Konoye still hopes that Massayuki Tani, his special ambassador at large in China, may be able to reach an agreement with Sir Archibald Kerr, the British Ambassador, which would result in an Anglo-Japanese "deal."

Such an arrangement reportedly would include British pressure on China to force her to come to terms with Japan, possibly with the United States acting as mediator if President Roosevelt could be induced to assume the role.

Earthquakes Kill 1,000 in Turkey; 18 Villages Razed

Ankara, Turkey, April 21 (AP).—Biting cold and almost continual rain tonight added to the desperate plight of tens of thousands of survivors of earthquakes which devastated a prosperous area of central Turkey and killed nearly 1,000 persons.

The government dispatched scores of planes carrying physicians, nurses and relief workers to the distressed regions. Shipments of blankets, tents, clothing, food and medicine were hastened by air and road.

Thousands of persons saw their homes leveled by a series of tremors that made Tuesday afternoon and last night periods of terror. Eighteen villages were destroyed and 22 others badly damaged. Whole families were buried alive.

Treasury to Free $50,000,000 Weekly in Gold to U. S. Banks; Congress Rail Aid to Be Asked Wheeler Parley Decides to Seek Action at Present Session.

$300,000,000 Loans From RFC Urged

More Conferences Slated With Management, Labor Leaders.

Agreement to seek emergency aid for the railroads at this session of Congress was reached yesterday at a conference between spokesmen for railway management and labor and Chairman Burton K. Wheeler, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

No final conclusions were announced on what form the aid may take, but hopes were held out for $300,000,000 in RFC equipment loans under the new recovery program, modification of ICC restrictions on rail borrowing and special project relief for furloughed rail workers.

Wheeler promised rail representatives to confer with House and Administration leaders on prospective action this session. He said further conferences would be held next week with railway labor leaders and executives with Chairman Jesse Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and with Works Progress Administrator Harry Hopkins.

Against Outright Subsidy.

Wheeler opposed any outright subsidies to the roads and declared it was impracticable to get permanent or long-range railroad legislation through Congress at this session.

"It would be impossible to undertake comprehensive action now," said Wheeler. "I wouldn't propose it and it would not be possible to get it through. But I think there is a good prospect of some legislation of an emergency nature."

The Interstate Commerce Committee chairman said the railroad representatives suggested a six-point program of emergency relief. He said he was inclined to favor some of the proposals, but was emphatically opposed to others.

Proposals covered in the conference included:

Making $300,000,000 available by the RFC for low-interest equipment loans to the roads, under the new recovery program.

Waiving of present Interstate Commerce Commission loan certification requirements, to permit roads on the "border" of reorganization to borrow from the general funds of the RFC.

Creation under the proposed $1,250,000,000 work relief program of so-called "sponsored projects" for furloughed rail workers, under which the roads would supply materials and WPA would pay salaries.

Abandonment of so-called "land grant" rates under which the Government pays lesser fares for Federal property moving over the roads. Wheeler stipulated that the

16 Die, 54 Injured As Cafe Building Falls in Alabama

Phenix City, Ala., April 21 (AP).—At least 16 colored persons lost their lives today in the collapse of the Ritz Cafe. Fifty-four received treatment for injuries.

John Jenks, reporter for the Columbus Enquirer, said that "rescuers estimated the bodies of at least 10 more would be recovered."

The collapse of one wall of the cafe building came only a day after part of the roof of an adjoining building had fallen, burdened by rain-water on the roof.

"There is no telling exactly how many were in the building at the time it fell in," Jenks said.

[The United Press reported colored persons gathered in the cafe each afternoon, where it was said a daily lottery drawing was held—Editor's note.]

Purge in Mongolia Ends Japan 'Plot'

Moscow, April 21 (U.P.).—A ruthless purge in the Soviet protectorate of Outer Mongolia, rivaling perhaps the Russian purge with its toll of more than 2,000 lives, was reported tonight in connection with an alleged Japanese plot to start an armed revolution. The purge has been under way more than a year.

McNutt Plans To Quit Oct. 1; Is Denied Cash

House Refuses to Allot Him $10,000 to Spend as He 'Deems Proper.'

Paul V. McNutt, stalwart handsome High Commissioner to the Philippines, and generally recognized as a Presidential aspirant, yesterday lost a $10,000 battle in the House at about the same time it was being announced from the floor that he would resign his island post on October 1.

Representative Albert J. Engel (Republican), of Michigan, who in recent days has loudly protested against construction of two "palaces" for the High Commissioner at a cost of $750,000, won his fight to knock out an appropriation item under which he said the High Commissioner could spend $10,000 for "cats, dogs, liquor or pop." His point of order that no law permits such an official to spend public money "at his discretion" was sustained. The appropriation would have been "for maintenance of his household and such other purposes as he may deem proper."

Aside from this setback, however, the McNutt undertakings fared well in the Capital during the day.

Bids to Be Opened.

The procurement division of the Treasury announced, in spite of the furore over the proposed "palaces," that bids would be opened on April 29 for the larger of the official dwellings, to be built at Manila and to cost $500,000. Plans for a $250,000 summer residence for the commissioner, at Baguio, will not be completed until May or June, it was said, and bids for it probably will be opened in June or July.

At the same time, McNutt's appropriation recommendations survived an attempt in the House by Representative Tarver (Democrat), of Georgia, to eliminate a $5,530 increase in miscellaneous salaries for the commissioner's clerks, caretakers and messenger.

McNutt's resignation plan was disclosed to the House by Representative Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who said the High Commissioner had revealed his intention during hearings by the House Appropriations Committee on appropriations for his office in the next fiscal year.

Carries Out His Plan.

The resignation, when it becomes effective, will bring the former Indiana "czar" back into the scenes of fermenting 1940 political aspirations. That he would remain long in far-away Manila never has been believed by political observers, and

U. S. Workers Here Organize Kennedy Club

Democratic Strife Reaches Washington From Keystone State.

By the Associated Press.

The break in Pennsylvania's Democratic councils extended to the ranks of Federal employes here yesterday with the organization of a Kennedy-for-Governor Club by a wing of the Pennsylvania Democratic Club.

A group sympathetic to Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy organized after a meeting of the Pennsylvania Democratic Club adjourned Wednesday night.

The Democratic Club is an arm of the Pennsylvania Democratic State committee, which indorsed Charles Alvin Jones for the nomination for Governor. Kennedy, seeking the same nomination, is supported by Senator Guffey and John L. Lewis.

Thomas J. Mangan, president of the Democratic Club, emphasized the new unit did not represent a split with the older organization. He said the intraparty rivalry was not debated in the first meeting.

"A large percentage of the club is in favor of Kennedy," said Mangan, "and that's why they formed the club."

The new unit designated Ramsay Black, Third Assistant Postmaster General, as honorary president and elected these officers:

President, James P. McDonald, Lackawanna; vice president, Emily Bradshaw, Delaware; secretary, Mary Fowler, Monroe; treasurer, Rhea McGarvey, Luzerne; executive committee chairman, Harry Murphy, Northampton; executive committee members, J. B. Bradshaw, Philadelphia; John McGee, Carbon; John Krantz, Lackawanna; Margaret Creecy, Schuylkill; F. J. McMahon, Allegheny; Paul Gibbons and Joseph McGeady, Luzerne; Mary Jennings, Lackawanna.

Meanwhile, Secretary Ickes said

Ottawa, April 21.—(Canadian Press)—A request for judicial inquiry into the guardians' management of the Dionne quintuplets has been filed with the Ontario attorney general's office on behalf of Oliva Dionne, their father.

Bigamous Bride of 6 Kills Self In Jail to Dodge Murder Trial

By the United Press.

Pocahontas, Ark., April 21.—Mrs. Cora T. Hebner, who married six times without bothering to get a divorce, today committed suicide by drinking poison in jail where she was awaiting trial on a charge of murdering one of her husbands.

She left a note saying Will Hebner, aged husband whom she was accused of killing and who, she said, had married 16 times without a divorce, brought her the poison.

"I did not kill Will Hebner," said a note found in the pocket of the woman's gingham dress. "He is still alive and brought me the poison with which I killed myself. He brought it one dark, stormy night the first week I was in jail.

"Hell could not hold any more torture than what I have already been through. I'll rob you of any further fun and cheat the natives out of a Roman holiday."

The sheriff believed Hebner had been killed, despite the note. He found the woman's body slumped over in her cell this afternoon. A small vial, which had contained the poison, was empty beside her.

A coroner's jury decided Mrs. Hebner "ended her own life

Wheels Set in Motion to Move $1,400,000,000 Hoard of Metal.

House Conducts Spending Hearing

$632,098,000 Is Ready for Road Building, Bureau Says.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's program to expand credit churned swiftly into motion yesterday as the Treasury announced plans to move desterilized gold into the Nation's banks.

Proposals to extend spending-lending features of the $4,512,000,000 recovery program to include emergency aid to the railroads were advanced at the Capitol, where railway labor and management executives conferred with Chairman Burton K. Wheeler, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

A House Appropriations Committee moved through the second day of hearings on $1,250,000,000 for emergency relief, and a half dozen Government agencies perfected plans for their part in the "pump-priming" drive:

Morgenthau Tells Plans.

Developments were:

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., said the $1,400,000,000 in recently desterilized gold will be gradually released to the banks at the rate of $50,000,000 a week until further notice. Weekly at the Treasury, $50,000,000 in maturing short-term Treasury bills will be paid off in cash, while new securities of the same type and in the same amount will be issued to replace an additional $50,000,000 maturing weekly.

Senator Wheeler agreed to discuss emergency aid for railroads with House and Senate leaders, and Administration spokesmen. While opposing outright subsidies or any attempt at a long-range rail problem solution at this session, Wheeler agreed to seek loans for roads on the "border" of bankrupicy, and to attempt to find work projects for furloughed rail workers.

The Federal Bureau of Public Roads announced that a total of $632,098,000 could be used for highway construction in the next 14 months. Under Congressional authorization, the Government's share would be $370,795,000 and the States' share, $261,303,000.

Before the PWA "pump priming" program is approved by Congress, Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes advised public bodies whose projects have been approved under the old PWA program to "start looking around" to see how they could be put under way.

To Lunch With President.

The White House announced Henry Ford will lunch informally with the President next Wednesday, and Ford at Sudbury, Mass., confirmed that he would discuss business conditions with Mr. Roosevelt at that time. Ford said he had no axe to grind, and did not intend to give any advice.

On the floor of the House, Representative John Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee, denounced the President's proposed spending-lending program and suggested a six-point Republican recovery alternative. Taber predicted a Federal deficit of $8,000,000,000 during the coming fiscal year.

Capper Exhorts District to Vote For Suffrage

Calls D. C. 'an Arid Area of Virtual Dictatorship' in Democracy.

Calling Washington an "arid area of virtual dictatorship here in the midst of a land dedicated to democracy," Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, last night urged his radio listeners to return a heavy vote on April 30 for local and national suffrage.

Speaking over Station WJSV, Senator Capper asked Washingtonians to attend tonight's mass meeting on suffrage at 8 o'clock at the Central High School auditorium. The meeting, he said, is a final mobilization "before you storm the barricades which have kept you, from the standpoint of self-determined democracy, the most degraded community in the United States."

"Your voteless exile," he added, "is neither natural in the light of the Constitution, nor no longer greeted by the mass of citizens with indifference." He predicted that the April 30 poll will be an irrevocable refutation of cries that the District is not actually interested in suffrage.

Points to Kansas.

He compared Washington's "supine" attitude towards suffrage with the feeling in his home State of Kansas. "If anybody out there questioned the right of a Kansas-American to vote, he'd have a small riot on his hands. And within 30 minutes every able bodied man in Kansas would be ready to defend his right, even if the best weapon at hand happened to be a pitchfork," he added.

At a luncheon meeting yesterday at the Annapolis Hotel, Bradford Ross told the Junior Board of Commerce that more that 30 precinct captains will shortly be appointed to organize house-to-house canvassing. Speakers will be assigned to appear before civic organizations next week.

"We hope to set an example to young men and women of the city by making it known that the 450 members of the junior board will turn out 100 per cent on April 30," Ross said.

Information Booth.

The Voteless League of Women Voters has established an information booth at 1100 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, and are planning to distribute informational literature on precincts and polling places from this headquarters.

Mondell announced that the sixty-third precinct has been added to the list of voting districts, with Central High School designated as the voting place for April 30. The precinct is bounded by Sixteenth street northwest and Columbia road northwest to Eleventh street northwest, to Florida avenue, to W street, to Sixteenth street, to Columbia road.

Delegates to the Federation of Business Mens Associations at their monthly meeting last night were urged to rally as many citizens as possible to vote.

Principal speakers were Theodore Grape, president; John Paul Jones, associate counsel, and B. W. Payne.

Emil Schramm, member of the board of directors of the RFC, told of RFC activities.

After adopting a resolution urging a 100 per cent vote for suffrage, the Congress Heights Citizens Association last night appointed ten members to handle precinct arrangements.

These are Mrs. Edna Dulin, Lee Dulin, Mrs. Anna Gannon, E. J. Read, Benson Taylor, jr., J. Louis Glebman, Miss Hazel Young, Mrs. Benson Taylor, Mrs. Alma Allen and Frazier White.

The association appropriated $10 to aid the campaign, and went on record as urging an eight-hour day for all employes at Gallinger Hospital.

Finch Considers Next 10 Days Vital for Democracy in D. C.

WILBUR S. FINCH.

Man Whom Every Suffrage Group Unanimously Elects Has 300 Years of American Ancestry Behind Him; He Is of Fourth Generation Here.

By Christine Sadler

Events in Washington during the next ten days will have "a most important bearing on the future democracy" of the District, in the opinion of Wilbur S. Finch, president of the D. C. Suffrage Association and chairman of the Citizens' Conference on District Suffrage.

A rally of conference members will be held tonight in the Central High School auditorium, where final action will be taken on the suffrage platform. Referendum on voting will be held April 30.

Since District residents are unversed in the art of casting a ballot, the referendum literature is being prepared in such a way that "any one who can read" will have full information in ample time to learn when and where to vote and to make up his mind on how he wants to vote—for local suffrage or against it—for the kind of local government he chooses to have.

Finch believes that obtaining the vote for District residents should be the primary concern of all citizens and organizations interested in the welfare of the city. He presents this view so well that he is unanimously elected head of almost every suffrage group which gets under way. During the past year he has been catapulted from presidency of ever-growing organizations—as the suffrage snowball reached the largest proportions it has ever had.

"I think we have the situation well in hand. Sincere and influential members of Congress are behind us as they never have been before," Finch declares.

His main technique in whipping new suffrage organizations into shape has been to eliminate discussion on everything except suffrage—which is a harder job than it might seem.

Finch—young, active and hard-working—was born in Washington, the youngest member of the fourth generation of a family of District residents. His family, of British descent, has been American for more than 300 years.

Finch's career has been devoted almost exclusively to the field of international law and international relations. On several occasions he served as special counsel to the American commissioner on the German-American Claims Commission.

He has taken an active part in the civic life of Washington. He helped organize and is a past president of the Burroughs Citizens Association and is chairman of suffrage for the Federation of Citizens Associations.

His wife is the former Marie S. Schwartz, also of Washington. They have three boys and four girls.

He is a charter member of Bunker Hill Post No. 31 of the American Legion. He was a private in the infantry during the World War, but refers to himself as one of Uncle Sam's "tin soldiers," as he never went overseas.

On Monday—A. Julian Brylawski, president of the District of Columbia Council on Municipal Affairs and chief barker of the Variety Club, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Connally Assails Bridges for Slap At Administration

Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, sharply criticized Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, on the floor of the Senate yesterday for a statement the latter issued claiming the "Roosevelt Administration had kept him off the joint congressional committee picked to investigate the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Connally asserted that statements the New Hampshire member had made reflected on Vice President Garner, the Administration and every member of the Senate.

Connally added:

"And now the Senator thinks he should have been on the investigating committee. Is he an unbiased judge? Is he one who could go into the box with his hands clean?"

Borah and Roosevelt Discuss Anti-Monopoly

By the Associated Press.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, said after a luncheon conference with President Roosevelt yesterday he wanted to shape his anti-monopoly bill "in harmony with the Administration's program so we can get somewhere." Borah is co-author with Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, of a bill providing Federal licensing of interstate corporations.

Russell Balks At Paying $280 Postage Bill

Resigned HOLC Counsel Defends Franked Letters About Aide.

Horace Russell, resigned general counsel of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, last night said he "saw no reason" why he should pay a $280 bill assessed by the Postoffice Department for franked letters he mailed in behalf of a former associate.

Accused of sending 9,600 postage-free letters praising the legal qualifications of Judge O. B. Taylor, who resigned as associate general counsel of the HOLC to enter private law practice, Russell declared:

"I considered those letters as official business. They notified employes of Judge Taylor's resignation from the corporation. Although I have not been in communication with the Postoffice Department, I don't feel I owe the postage bill."

Postal authorities announced earlier that Russell would be asked to pay the $280. Decision as to whether Russell will be prosecuted under the franking law, said Ramsay Black, Third Assistant Postmaster General, awaits the return of Postmaster General Farley, who is expected back in the city next week.

Russell's resignation, which followed charges on the floor of the House by Representative Church (Republican), of Illinois, has been accepted by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Postoffice records showed yesterday that no one ever had paid a fine for abusing the franking privilege. A total of 1,107,252,468 pieces of free mail was carried by the department last year.

G.O.P. Will Regain 76 Seats in House, Martin Prophesies

Representative Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts, Republican Congressional campaign chairman, predicted yesterday that his party would win at least 76 Democratic seats in the House in the November elections.

"Several weeks ago I predicted we would win 65 seats," Martin said, "but opposition to the New Deal is growing so fast that I feel safe in increasing that figure by 11. It is entirely possible that we will win control of the House."

The Republicans now hold 90 seats and the Democrats 332.

The Gallup Poll

Public Opposes Ban on Pictures Showing the Birth of a Baby.

By Dr. George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, April 31.—Praised by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt as an "honest" piece of work but banned by censors in several cities, the film, "The Birth of a Baby," has started a controversy in which one important question is: would public opinion consider the film indecent or in bad taste?

George Gallup.

A Nation-wide survey clearly indicates that the public was not offended by excerpts of the film which were reproduced in a recent issue of Life magazine. Although Life was banned from the newsstands in many communities, an overwhelming majority of adults who saw the photographs in the magazine did not consider them indecent and approved thoroughly of their publication.

The survey was conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion among a representative cross-section of the voting population in all parts of the country.

The institute estimates that, during the first ten days after copies of Life were put on sale, approximately 17,000,000 adults saw the childbirth pictures in the magazine. Since Life's circulation is 2,000,000, there were approximately eight readers per copy—an interesting indication of the tremendous effect which censorship has in advertising a publication.

To all voters who had seen the Life pictures the institute put two questions. The first was:

"In your opinion do these pictures violate the law against publication of material which is obscene, filthy or indecent?"

The vote was:

Yes	24%
No	76

The next question read: "Do you approve of this method of teaching the public about childbirth and care of mothers?"

The vote:

Approve	61%
Disapprove	39

The results point to the conclusion that the voting public is less easily offended in matters of this sort than many censors seem to think.

Does the public think that people on relief are getting enough money? Read the Gallup Poll in Sunday's Post.

Rigid Care in Spending Urged by Gov. Lehman

New York, April 21 (AP).—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, who recently vetoed a series of appropriations passed by the legislature, said in an address to the Merchants Association today:

"I am convinced that in the present situation and with the business future still obscured by much uncertainty, it is essential that all units of Government scrutinize their expenditures as carefully and as rigidly as possible. There is no magic way for government to raise money."

Illinois Governor Says He'll Call Legislators

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 21 (AP).—Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois announced today he would issue a call for a special session of that State's Legislature early in May, with the possibility the State relief administration set-up might be overhauled.

Horner and about a dozen State officials and political allies met today to consider moves for the coming campaign to further the Governor's announced intention of "smashing the Kelly-Nash machine."

Rich Friends Tell How They Saved Whitney

Lent Him Vast Sums on Strength of Name, Say SEC Witnesses.

By the United Press.

New York, April 21.—The little group of millionaires whom Richard Whitney fleeced out of one fortune after another marched across the witness stand today and said they lent him money because their faith in his integrity was unshaken up to the day he confessed he was a criminal.

A Securities and Exchange Commission hearing got the full story of Whitney's fight to save himself from Sing Sing Prison—a desperate tour of Wall street, borrowing $100,000 here and $100,000 there. Most of the time he got the money solely on the strength of his name and reputation as bond broker for the mighty house of Morgan.

Middle-aged and elderly men who had known Whitney for years, affluent men who think nothing of lending a friend $100,000 overnight, talked in terms of dizzy sums of money.

They Didn't Suspect Him.

Right up to the day disaster overtook Whitney only one of those men suspected that the firm of Richard Whitney & Co. was in dire condition. He is a bald, jovial little man named Otto Abraham, of Abraham & Co. Between December, 1935, and March 8, 1938, when Richard Whitney & Co. failed, Abraham loaned Whitney $310,000.

Whitney would come over and get $100,000 from Abraham and repay it two or three months later. That went on, Abraham said, until April, 1937, when Whitney asked for the customary $100,000. Abraham let him have only $65,000, which was repaid. In September, 1937, Whitney was back for another $100,000; this time Abraham gave him only $30,000. That, too, was repaid, but on December 28, 1937, Whitney requested another $100,000. This time he got only $15,000, which never was repaid."

Imposed on Friend.

"Why," asked Gerard Gesell, SEC counsel, "did you start cutting down on the amounts you loaned to Whitney?"

"I got tired of it because I thought it was an imposition on friendship," Abraham said.

"You felt his position was pretty serious?"

"Yes, I did when I made the last loan."

None of the others in the select little group of wealthy men suspected anything, however, and in one frantic, two-week period Whitney was able to borrow more money than most men can hope to earn in a lifetime of hard work. Most of those men, according to the testimony, considered Richard Whitney a safe risk because of his own reputation and because his brother was George Whitney, partner in the House of Morgan.

Got Money Everywhere.

Whitney got money almost every place he went—at interest rates varying from nothing up to 6 per cent, but occasionally he ran into a friend who said "No." Such a man was Henry Rogers Winthrop, of Winthrop, Mitchell & Co.

"He asked me for $50,000 and I told him I didn't happen to have that much money available right then."

Whitney moved on to other men who said "Yes." The story he told them seldom varied, according to the testimony. It ran like this:

"A bank is pressing me for a loan and I wonder if you could give me an accommodation for a short time."

Never Asked Details.

The men who said "yes" never asked him details, never asked to see a financial statement of Richard Whitney & Co., near revealed to one another that they were lending money to Whitney. If Whitney was unable to repay the loans when they fell due, extensions were readily granted.

But on February 18, 1938, disaster was only three hours away from Whitney. He staved it off by walking into the office of Walter C. Rosen at lunch time, asking to borrow $170,000. He offered Rosen 8,000 shares of Distilled Liquor Corporation stock as security, but such was the power of the name of Whitney that Rosen said:

"I told him I did not want any security. I said I agreed with the elder Mr. Morgan that the personal integrity of the borrower is more important than collateral. I told him I would lend him $100,000 at 1¼ per cent interest, without any security.

$100,000 Conversation.

"He suggested 3 or 4 per cent interest. I said that 1¼ per cent would be all right because we wanted to show him our good will. He said the $100,000 would enable him to make arrangements at the bank."

It cost Rosen $100,000 to hold that conversation with Whitney.

The most frantic period in Whitney's campaign to save himself with his friends' money came in the middle of February, 1938.

On February 15 he borrowed $100,000 from Alexander B. Gale, but that sum had disappeared in two days and Whitney went in search of further help. He got $62,500 from Donald Geddes, but that some, too, failed to stem the tide that was running against Whitney. From then until March 8—when Richard Whitney & Co. failed—he borrowed what he could, knowing that it was improbable that he ever could repay it.

Executive Rift Proves Puzzle To Legislators

Governor of Washington Revokes Aide's Call to Relief Session.

By the Associated Press.

Olympia, Wash., April 21.—Bewildered State legislators, facing a Lieutenant Governor's call for a special relief session and a Governor's proclamation revoking the call, wondered tonight what to do.

Gov. Clarence D. Martin invoked the executive power in an unprecedented attempt to nullify Lieut. Gov. Victor A. Meyers' summons to the lawmakers to meet Monday for action on relief, housing and tax measures.

The Governor, supported by conservatives, contended there was no "extraordinary occasion" requiring an extra session. Meyers, who called the session at the urging of "left wing" elements, asserted thousands of citizens were in need of relief.

Temporarily stumped by Martin's action, Meyers set up headquarters in an Olympia hotel, avowedly to muster a quorum of the lawmakers.

Some legislators said they would respond. State Senator Gordon Klembard began a poll of the 26 majority senators. The Senate has been predominantly conservative.

"It Is Up to Them."

Just before Martin issued the revocation order, Meyers predicted a majority of the 99 House members would appear and that 16 or 18 of the 46 Senators would respond to the call.

Meyers said he would recess the Senate from day to day until a majority in that house appeared.

"Then," he said, "we will force the remainder of the members to report for duty or resign. County commissioners then will appoint successors who will report and do their duty.

"I have given the legislators the opportunity many of them and thousands of people have wanted for some time. Now it is up to them."

The controversy developed when Meyers dashed homeward from a California vacation to issue the call in the absence of Martin, who was in Washington, D. C.

Martin flew back into the State just as Meyers was seeking unsuccessfully to have the Secretary of State attest his proclamation. The Attorney General held Meyers' proclamation invalid but suggested a court test of its merits.

On Capitol Hill

Rep. Umstead Squirms as Colleagues in the House Sing His Praises.

Representative Umstead (Democrat), of North Carolina, had an uncomfortable time in the House yesterday when he was required to listen to praise of himself by a half-dozen members. The laudation came in connection with Umstead's determination to retire from Congress this year after serving three terms. He has been serving as chairman of the naval appropriation subcommittee and, as chairman of the House conferees on the Navy Department supply bill, called up the Senate-House compromise on that measure yesterday.

REP. UMSTEAD.

Chairman Vinson of the Naval Affairs Committee, Majority Leader Rayburn, Minority Leader Snell and Representatives Woodrum, of Virginia, and Doughton and Kerr, of North Carolina, all promptly sang praises of his "fine sense of honor, good judgment, high sense of patriotic duty and ability." Umstead squirmed through much of it, then got the floor to "move the previous question on the adoption of the conference report."

A constitutional amendment to prohibit drunkenness was proposed yesterday by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who said he acted as the request of a group of Baptist ministers. He said that prohibition of the sale of liquor had failed, and would fail again if tried.

* * * *

The $220,634,725 appropriation bill for nonmilitary activities of the War Department was passed by the House and sent to the Senate yesterday. Army engineers would be permitted by the measure to proceed with authorized flood control and river and harbor projects costing $207,000,000.

Letters from Secretary Wallace to two House members, made public yesterday, declared it would be better to continue the old food-and-drug act than to pass the new measure approved by the House Interstate Commerce Committee. Administration of the law would be "hamstrung," Wallace said, by the court review section of the new bill, and a minority committee report declared the section would place control of enforcement in hands of those "whose interests are contrary to public welfare and who have created the need for legislation. The minority report was signed by Representatives Chapman (Democrat), of Kentucky; O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana; Mapes (Republican), of Michigan; Wolverton (Republican), of New Jersey; Wolfenden (Republican), of Pennsylvania, and Holmes (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Arms Parley Is Held Vital By Vandenberg

'Super Super' Navies Will Drive World to Bankruptcy, He Warns.

By the Associated Press.

An international conference should be arranged in an effort to save the arming world from bankruptcy, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan told the Senate yesterday in an attack on the Administration's big Navy bill.

He contended the proposed expansion of the United States fleet might cost far more than the $1,156,000,000 which officials have estimated, and warned that sound national credit was "just as vital a part of the national defense as a navy."

The Senate suspended debate on the expansion measure long enough to complete congressional action on the $546,866,000 regular Navy appropriation bill for the fiscal year beginning July. It now goes to the White House for President Roosevelt's signature.

"Democracy's Answer."

The action was taken by approving a compromise between Senate and House approved Naval appropriation bills. The House took the same action earlier.

Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, entered the expansion debate briefly to declare the legislation was democracy's answer to "land-grabbing, swash-buckling dictators."

Vandenberg said, on the other hand, that the bill called for a "super super navy," for which "there is absolutely no justification."

"If we arm to be impregnable against all other powers," Vandenberg shouted, "then even the super super navy would not be enough. We would need a super super super super navy—and no one has even dared to mention that."

Discussing an arms limitation conference, he said that if the old 5-5-3 ratio of naval strength for the United States, Great Britain and Japan were tossed overboard a "free conference" could be conducted.

"Any realist will recognize that reliance on the old 5-5-3 ratio is not justified today," Vandenberg said. Such a ratio only promoted international jealousies and tempted nations to build navies beyond treaty limits, he added.

Senator Bone (Democrat), Washington, said the naval expansion program might cost $2,000,000,000 "by the time we pluck . . . bids out of the air."

"$4,000,000,000 Outlay."

Vandenberg and Senator Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, estimated the program, together with existing authorizations for Navy shipbuilding, might entail a $4,000,000,000 outlay.

The chamber recessed late in the day until noon Monday, when debate on the naval expansion bill, which already has been approved by the House, will be resumed.

In the House yesterday, the Judiciary Committee heard from Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, that a proposal to suspend Government contracts held by any companies found to be violating the Wagner labor act might hamper ship construction. Leahy said the Navy Department objected to the proposal.

Reinstate Strikers, Douglas Ordered

By the United Press.

The National Labor Relations Board tonight found the Douglas Aircraft Co., Inc., of Santa Monica, Calif., guilty of violating the Wagner act and ordered it to reinstate, with back pay, 45 sit-down strikers.

In its second major sit-down decision, the board affirmed its ruling in the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation case, "that participation in a sit-down strike which was conducted without violence or serious damage to property did not, in itself, justify a refusal to reinstate."

Eleven of those ordered reinstated were convicted in the Los Angeles superior court of conspiracy to seize and hold private property, which the board said was a misdemeanor. The men were fined and an appeal now is pending.

C. I. O. Extends Detroit Strikes; 12 Plants Close

8 Aluminum Factories Affected by Row Over Seniority Rights.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 21.—The C. I. O. affiliated United Automobile Workers extended strikes to six additional Detroit plants today, at the same time bringing their disputed "dues-collection" picket line maneuver to this city.

Eight plants of the Bohn Aluminum & Brass Corporation were among a dozen closed tonight by labor disputes. Bohn officials who said the corporation had a $10,000,000 investment here announced plans to move their operations were being considered.

15 Workers Questioned.

At the Vernor highway plant of the Briggs Manufacturing Co., pickets stopped and questioned about 15 workers.

Similar tactics at Flint, Mich., earlier this week resulted in the closing of two General Motors units there. Some 3,700 employes of the Fisher body plant No. 1 returned to work this morning.

Employes of the Buick division of General Motors, dependent on the Fisher unit for bodies, were called to return to work tomorrow morning.

Police Not Concerned.

Heinrich A. Pickert, Detroit police commissioner who announced yesterday dues-collecting picket lines would be dispersed, said today his department "takes no interest in the methods used by a union to collect dues, so long as they are peaceable."

The eight Bohn Aluminum plants normally employ 3,200 men but only about 1,000 have been working. Richard T. Frankenstein, U. A. W. vice president, charging the Bohn management was "trying to deprive 2,400 men" of seniority rights, authorized the strike and pledged the international union's support.

Strikes protesting wage cuts affected the American Brass Co. plant and that of the Michigan Steel Castings Co. Other idle plants included the Detroit Moulding Corporation and the Hulet Top & Body Co. Hulet officials termed announcement of a strike "ridiculous" and said the plant had had no work done for three months.

Roosevelt Weighs May Fishing Trip In the Caribbean

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt, it was learned yesterday, is considering a short fishing trip in the Caribbean Sea starting about May 1 from Charleston, S. C.

It was indicated, however, the President mould make the trip only if the congressional situation permitted.

It was said the President probably would board one of the Navy's new 10,000-ton cruisers at Charleston and cruise in the vicinity of the Leeward Islands, where he fished on returning from the Buenos Aires peace conference in December, 1936.

Colored Entertainer's White Wife Held Insane

New York, April 21 (AP).—Sylvia Lazarus, former Smith College student who married William S. H. Stewart, Harlem colored entertainer, was declared legally insane today in papers signed by Westchester County Judge Frank H. Coyne. The 27-year-old woman was ordered confined in Bloomingdale Hospital, private sanitarium at White Plains, N. Y.

Emergency Aid For Rails Put on Congress' Slate

Rail

lower rates should apply where troops and supplies were moved in wartime.

Regulation of water transportation under the I. C. C. and elimination of Government-owned barge lines. Wheeler is definitely opposed to this proposal.

Repeal of the "long and short haul" clause of the I. C. C. act forbidding a lower rate for a long haul than for a short one. Wheeler is personally opposed to this proposal. A repealer already has passed the House, and is before his committee.

Revision of present I. C. C. rate-making procedure.

"Candidly," Wheeler told reporters following the conference, "some of these roads ought to go through reorganization. Making loans to such roads for the purpose of paying their bondholders should not be done. But there are certain 'border-line' roads that might be given loans to tide them over impending bankruptcy, with the possibility that a pick-up in business might keep them out of bankruptcy."

Wages Not Discussed.

Wage-cut proposals were not discussed at the conference. Much of the ground covered yesterday had been previously discussed in the President's rail message to Congress on April 11, transmitting recommendations of various groups. Like Wheeler, the President opposed direct subsidies, and recommended thoroughgoing study before enactment of permanent legislation. But Mr. Roosevelt urged the need of some immediate legislation "in order to prevent serious financial and operating difficulties between now and the convening of the next Congress."

Canvassing the emergency needs of the roads with Senator Wheeler were J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, and George M. Harrison, president of the Railroad Labor Executives Association.

Harrison told reporters that "our problem is bigger than a mere matter of wages."

150,000 Jobs Lost.

"When you consider the situation of the roads you must deal not only with employment but with every phase of the business. That the situation is serious you can see from the fact that 150,000 jobs have been lost since October. Since 1929 there have been 700,000 jobs lost."

Wheeler indicated to reporters he would take up with Hopkins the matter of providing work out of WPA funds for furloughed rail workers, but he thought legislation would be necessary.

"I would like to see the furloughed men put on a substantial project of some value," said Wheeler.

The Montanan did not definitely preclude the possibility of action this session to modify the bankruptcy statutes to facilitate rail reorganizations or establishment of a single three-man court in charge of reorganizations.

Labor, Executives Agree.

Wheeler indicated railway labor and management executives were in joint agreement on most of the emergency aid proposals broached yesterday. But the Senator himself was chary of specific commitments on his own views.

He said he thought proposals to make $300,000,000 of RFC funds available for equipment loans were "constructive," and pointed out that he already had introduced a bill requiring Government traffic in peacetime to pay the full rate by eliminating land-grant reductions.

Linked with loan proposals was the suggestion that the RFC be empowered to make loans without certification by the Interstate Commerce Commission stating that the railroad can meet its fixed charges.

To only two of the emergency aid proposals did Wheeler express immediate and definite hostility—elimination of Government-owned barge lines and repeal of the long-and-short-haul clause of the Interstate Commerce act.

Bigamous Bride of 6 Kills Self In Jail to Dodge Murder Trial

through self-administered poison, source of which was not known."

Officers several weeks ago found a skeleton in the cellar of the farm home the Hebners had near here. Mrs. Hebner was found in Miami living with an aged man whom she intended to marry. She maintained that she had not killed Hebner and that she believed he was alive.

Officers brought Mrs. Hebner back here and, after an investigation and questioning her, charged her with murder.

The Hebners had lived a secluded life on their farm near here and had posted a sign, "No visitors wanted." They met their mates through "lonely heart" and "Cupid" magazines.

Mrs. Hebner advertised herself in the magazines as a "loving, loyal honest widow by death." She told officers, however, that Hebner was not dead, but was in Africa."

"I was a foolish old woman," she later said, "for having sought comradeship through a Cupid bureau."

Prosecuting Attorney George H. Steimel said neither Hebner nor his wife bothered to get a divorce after their "mail order" marriages.

Hebner and this Mrs. Hebner came here in 1936. Hebner disappeared last May. Officers believed Mrs. Hebner killed him and stuffed his body in the cellar where the skeleton was found.

One of Mrs. Hebner's lonely heart husbands was Joe Heiker, of Putnam, Okla., whom she married in 1936. She lived with him ten days, was given some money by him and then returned to Hebner. Officers verified this marriage during the investigation of Hebner's disappearance.

The other marriages occurred in Texas and in Stevensville, Mont.

Mrs. Hebner said her husband, Hebner, "got married wherever the idea struck him." She did not name any of his wives.

Two brothers of the missing man came here from Houston and Cameron, Tex., in an effort to identify the skeleton. They were unsuccessful, however, and said they had not seen him since 1914.

Site of Abattoir Sought for Park

A bill to authorize purchase and condemnation of the old Benning slaughter house site for park purposes by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission was before the Senate District Committee yesterday. It was introduced Wednesday by Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York.

Copeland, who offered the bill upon request of counsel of Adolf Gobel, Inc., which sought to rebuild the slaughter house last year, said he understood Secretary Ickes, who fought the abattoir reconstruction, was favorable to the park development.

McNutt Denied Petty Cash; Will Quit Post Oct. 1

the former Governor of the Hoosiers himself made it clear that such was not his intention when he accepted the Philippines appointment on February 17 last year. At that time he said that while he had not placed any definite limit on the period of his service in the Philippines, it was not reasonable to expect him to remain there long.

The lavish reception recently held here in his honor by Indiana followers lent weight to the belief that he would soon be back in continental United States definitely, permanently and actively.

Meanwhile, Engel's fight on the proposed "palaces" was continued in the House. The Michigan Republican declared files of the Treasury Procurement Division disclosed that original plans for the larger structure called for a residence "84 feet wider and 64 feet longer than the White House." These plans, he said, bore the written approval of Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan, who preceded McNutt in the Philippines position. Murphy, Engel said the record showed, had termed a contemplated expenditure of $1,000,000 for the structure "very reasonable."

Specifications Cut Down.

The plan for the smaller structure, he continued, bears the written approval of Commissioner McNutt, and called originally for a summer home 55 feet wide, 161 feet long, 43 feet high and containing 47 rooms.

He added that the Procurement Division "or somebody" had cut down the specifications on both proposed residences.

"The Philippine Islands have cost us $835,000,000 from 1898 to 1934," Engel said, "and when you add the cost since then, it runs close to a billion dollars. If you add the newly created cost of the big Navy made necessary by a fear that Japan will attack the islands, you will add another billion or two. How long are we going to keep this up and spend large amounts of money in the Philippines when we are giving them their complete independence at their request in 1946?"

Laughter, Exercise Held Best Tonics For Men Past 50

Plenty of laughter and mild exercise were prescribed as the best health tonics for men past 50 by Dr. Arthur C. Christie yesterday to the Cosmopolitan Club in the Carlton Hotel.

He termed the medical system of the United States the best in the world, the average life span of men rising from 45 to 59 in 30 years. He cited control obtained over typhoid fever, diphtheria, smallpox and other diseases, and asserted that "Never in the history of the world has the outlook for health been so good as it is today."

Bluefield, W. Va., April 21 (AP).—Mrs. Ethel Starling Redman came home for a first visit since her marriage to find everyone believed she had died in the influenza epidemic of 1918.

In 1918, Mrs. Redman, then Ethel Starling, married and moved to Huntington. A few months later the couple moved first to Milwaukee and then to Portland, Oreg., their present home.

FTC Acquires Own Quarters; Neat, Not Gaudy

500 Employes Glad Shunting Around Is Over, But Lack Escalators.

For the first time in its history, the Federal Trade Commission was occupying a permanent home of its own yesterday.

Shunted from one temporary building to another, the commission was admittedly getting a bit tired of packing and unpacking while other Government agencies were settling down in nice new quarters.

Consequently, there were many sighs of relief yesterday when the commission's 500 employes moved into their pretentious home in the Apex Building, at the foot of the "Government Triangle."

It was stressed that their new surroundings were "neat but not gaudy." There are no tiled private baths for the commission members and no escalators. Everything is ultra-modern with indirect lighting, but not swanky.

The commission's conference and hearing rooms are the most luxurious. Green leather furnishings and Venetian blinds are provided for looks and comfort.

On the seevnth—and top—floor there is a cafeteria for employes. It overlooks the Capitol with long French windows opening into a spacious balcony.

The five-man Federal Trade Commission includes Garland S. Ferguson, chairman; Charles H. March, Robert E. Freer, Ewin L. Davis and W. A. Ayres.

it believed a $200,000 grant had been obtained.

The restoration could be "at best a pleasing fancy, and to the extent to which it is convincing to the unscholarly public, an historical falsification," the committee declared, pointing out lack of sufficient data on the original.

The original building has disappeared except for the foundation on which a later house has been built, the report stated. Furthermore, it added, there are "no drawings of the original . . . and restoration must be based on such information as can be gathered from Penn's secretary."

The report also charged that the institute's Philadelphia committee on preservation of historical buildings in each instance had been ignored in planning restorations, although the committee had supervised the restoration of Independence Hall.

Gentle Light Best For Reading, Says Ophthalmologist

Despite the increasing importance of proper illumination, the architect, the construction engineer, and the eye specialist have yet to get together in planning buildings, the post graduate course in ophthalmology at George Washington University was told yesterday.

Dr. LeGrand H. Hardy, of New York, said a diffused, not too intense light was best for reading purposes. He warned against sharp illumination contrasts in the same room, such as a bright reading lamp burning in conjunction with a ceiling light of low power. Shifting the eyes from one field to the other causes unnecessary strain, he said.

Anglo Catholics Score Church Report on Faith

Virgin Birth and Miracles Upheld, Birth Control Is Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 21.—The Catholic Advisory Council declared today its determination "to resist to the utmost the threatened disintegration of the Church of England" in a statement strongly criticizing the recent report of the church's commission on Christian doctrine.

The council represents more than 2,000 clerics and 50,000 Anglo-Catholic laymen.

The report which the council statement criticized was issued January 3 by a 21-man commission headed by the Archbishop of York. The commission was appointed in 1922 to resolve doctrinal differences.

Virgin Birth Doubted.

Described by some church leaders at the time as the most important Anglican document in almost 400 years, it declared the Bible was not infallible, historical evidence for Christ's birth from a virgin mother was inconclusive, and the Church of England was bound to resist papal claims.

The commission was divided on whether miracles occur, but agreed God "could do" them if he "would." It said "it is legitimate to suspend judgment" on angels and demons or treat them "symbolically."

Condemn Birth Control.

The Catholic Council statement affirmed the historical truth of the Virginal Conception and the Resurrection of Christ. It declared rejection of biblical evidence for miracles, the existence of good and evil spirits and eternal punishment of the finally impenitent was "clearly inconsistent with that scriptural and historic christianity to which the Church of England irrevocably is committed."

Statement condemned "many bishops" for "toleration of the use" of birth control methods and the policy adopted "in their dealings with divorced persons who have 'remarried' during the lifetime of former partners."

Anglo-Catholics consider the Roman Catholic Church, the Greek Orthodox Church and the Church of England all parts of this one universal church.

Hitler Pays Bills Of Kaiser, Audits Them With Care

New York, April 21 (AP).—Adolf Hitler is paying the bills of former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, Poultney Bigelow said today, and an accountant goes to Doorn, Holland, to check them virtually down to the penny.

"All the Kaiser owns in Germany is sand waste and forest land," said Bigelow, 83-year-old author, on his return from his annual visit to the former German emperor, his boyhood friend.

"He has to be subsidized by Hitler for his household expenses, and an accountant goes down to Doorn to check all his bills."

President Believed Eager to See Chile

Santiago, Chile, April 21 (U.P.).—Norman Armour, presenting his credentials as United States Ambassador, today informed President Arthur Alessandri in the name of President Roosevelt that the latter would be very pleased to visit Chile this year.

Armour, who succeeds Hoffman Philip, said Mr. Roosevelt "ardently desired" to make the trip.

Honolulu, April 21 (AP).—Heavy "Purple" forces of the United States fleet, including nine dreadnaughts, put to sea today to "attack" California, defended by "Green" warships of the fleet. Within ten days the opposing fleets will clash by sea and air in simulated combat to decide whether any future real enemy could successfully attack California.

Bars Removed To Talks Today By Paris, Rome

Duce Pledges Defense of Empire on Capital's 2,691st Birthday.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 21.—Franco-Italian conversations directed toward reestablishment of the friendship which existed before the Italo-Ethiopian war are scheduled to begin here tomorrow.

The way for the negotiations has been prepared by preliminary talks between Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and French Charge d'Affaires Jules Blondel.

Today's expected start of the formal discussions was delayed as Blondel awaited instructions from his government.

Diplomatic circles believed France was asking certain assurances before sending an ambassador accredited to Vittorio Emanuele as King of Italy and Emperor of Ethiopia.

This hurdle passed, the new ambassador was expected to take up the negotiations and carry them through to an accord similar to that signed last week by Italy and Great Britain for settlement of Mediterranean, African and Spanish problems.

Premier Mussolini today reiterated Italy's readiness to defend her new empire as the country celebrated the 2,691st anniversary of the founding of Rome.

Speaking to crowds in the Piazza Venezia, Il Duce declared::

"The Romans were not only invincible warriors and unsurpassed statesmen but workers and builders of roads, bridges and basilicas.

"They made the fields fertile and the cities rich. And the second Roman empire of our own will know how to be an empire of labor under the banner of peace protected by our arms."

The day commemorating the legendary ploughing of the furrow which marked Rome's first boundary was observed as Facist Labor Day.

Public works costing more than 50,000,000 lire ($2,500,000) were dedicated.

Little Entente Aids.

Paris, April 21 (U.P.).—The Little Entente, keystone of France's defense system in Central Europe, informed Premier Edouard Daladier tonight it will give full support to recognition of Italy's Ethiopian conquest and the Italo-French negotiations for a pact of friendship.

Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia informed France their council meeting in Bucharest May 6 will support Italian recognition.

Britain Renews Demands for Seized Oil Land

Asserts Right to Intervene in Behalf of English Holdings in Mexico.

By the United Press.

Mexico City, April 21.—Great Britain today renewed her demand for restoration of British oil properties expropriated by President Lazaro Cardenas and asserted its right to intervene in behalf of British interests in Mexico.

Following up its original protest against the oil seizures and Mexico's reply thereto with a new note, delivered by the first secretary of the British Legation, Britain rejected this government's contention that the Mexican Eagle Oil Co., "being a national (Mexican) company, is legally incapacitated from seeking support of a foreign state in defense of its interests."

Mexican Eagle Oil, a subsidiary of Royal Dutch Shell, was incorporated under the laws of Mexico in 1908. A majority of its stockholders are of British nationality.

Expropriation of the 17 British, American and Dutch petroleum properties is "contrary to equity and the rules of normal international practice," the note said.

The note was delivered simultaneously with American Ambassador Josephus Daniels' departure by airplane for the United States. The trip was understood to be in connection with May 2 festivities in Raleigh, N. C., in celebration of the Daniels' golden wedding anniversary. Mrs. Daniels left by train for Raleigh, but the ambassador's journey will take him to New York and Washington for the annual meeting of the Associated Press.

Paul Jones Relic To Be Given to U. S. By Canada Mayor

St. John, New Brunswick, April 21 (Canadian Press)—The quadrant of John Paul Jones, naval hero of the American Revolution is to be presented soon to the United States by Mayor D. L. MacLaren of St. John. Mayor MacLaren expects to go to Washington to make the presentation to President Roosevelt.

The quadrant, used by Jones in his campaigns against the British, will be put in the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

The quadrant passed to Jones' grandnephew, Simon Graham, who came to Canada from Scotland. Graham's son presented it to Mayor MacLaren's father.

British Princess Has Birthday Fete

Windsor, England, April 21 (U.P.).—Sitting in a high-backed oak chair made for Queen Victoria, Princess Elizabeth presided today at a party in the oak room of Windsor Castle in celebration of her twelfth birthday. Only members of the royal family and close friends were invited.

Elizabeth received many gifts, letters and telegrams, among them messages of greeting from the governors of Britain's colonies and premiers of the dominions.

Rebels Near Center of Madrid; Defense Is Split in Fierce Battle

Spain

generalissimo of the loyalist forces outside Catalonia.

The government's first line trenches in West Park were said to have been taken after fierce hand-to-hand combat.

The insurgent radio station at San Sebastian said the Madrid operations were carried out by the normal garrison that has been holding out in the ruins of University City on the east bank of the Manzanares river for 17 months.

The loyalists sent planes to meet the enemy air raiders along the coast, but no air battles were reported.

Patrols of government planes flew low over the Mediterranean alert for any insurgent ships attempting to land troops from the Balearic Islands to reinforce Franco's coastal hold.

In the Balaguer sector, 17 miles northeast of the Catalan border city of Lerida, held by Franco, the loyalists continued to hammer at insurgent lines in an effort to recapture the important hydroelectric plants north of Balaguer. The loss of the plants to Franco seriously crippled Catalonia's war industries.

It seemed improbable that Franco, in his drive from the University City suburbs of Madrid, was attempting to seize the city.

The insurgents are without any large concentrations or even nearby reinforcements in the northwest sector outside Madrid, while the loyalists have made the city a fortress.

Instead, it seemed more likely that Franco was attempting to consolidate his "starvation" grip on the metropolis and force Miaja to bring in reserves from the east, thereby reducing loyalist resistance against the insurgent operations on the seacoast.

The loyalist government in Barcelona, reorganizing Catalonia for a "long range" defense and claiming to have received large quantities of fresh war materials, ordered all boys of 18 years of age to report for military service by Wednesday.

The defense ministry also ordered all men of 32 years of age to report May 3 and be ready to "begin to march May 7."

Plaints to League Threaten to Upset Britain's Program

Geneva, April 21 (AP).—Troublesome, delicate questions piled up today for the League of Nations Council, scheduled to open a session May 9.

Haile Selassie, deposed and exiled emperor, notified Joseph A. C. Avenol, the League's secretary-general, he would be represented at the session to fight against recognition of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

Switzerland, seeking further guarantees of her neutrality and freedom from League obligations, drafted a demand the council place the question of her "integral neutrality" on the agenda.

The Barcelona government of Spain demanded the session take up the question of foreign intervention in the Spanish civil war.

These developments meant opposition to the course Britain is following in keeping her bargain with Italy, signed at Rome last Saturday.

2 Irish Parties Agree on Hyde For Presidency

Dublin, April 21 (AP).—Ireland's two largest political parties agreed today to invite Dr. Douglas Hyde, historian, poet and retired university professor, to run for the presidency of Ireland in the May 31 election.

Thus the parties, Prime Minister Eamon de Valera's Fianna Fail and the opposition Fine Gael, hope to avoid an election contest.

Dr. Hyde, who is 70, was expected to run, although he has made no announcement.

District Woman Chosen D. A. R. Vice President

Mrs. C. C. Haig Honored; Mrs. Robert, Baltimore, New President.

Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, retiring State regent of the District of Columbia, last night was named a vice president general of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, in an election which brought Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., of Baltimore, into office as president general.

Mrs. Robert, who is retiring treasurer general of the national society, was unopposed. When the votes were counted, however, there were three written in for Mrs. William H. Pouch, now national president of the C. A. R.; one for Mrs. Julius Talmage, of Georgia, and one for Mrs. William McFarlane, of Texas. Mrs. Robert received 1,792 of the 1,830 legal ballots cast.

Vice Presidents General.

Seven vice presidents general, in addition to Mrs. Haig, who received 1,298 votes, were elected from ten candidates. One of these, Mrs. Victor Abbot Binford, of Roxbury, Me., will serve only for a year, filling the unexpired term of the late Mrs. W. J. Ward, of New Jersey. Others are Mrs. Keene Arnold, of Versailles, Ky., who received 1,334 votes; Mrs. Arthur Rowbotham, Alta Vista, Va., 1,460; Mrs. Clarence Henry Adams, Denver, 1,483; Mrs. Val Taylor, Uniontown, Ala., 1,473; Mrs. Samuel McMartin, Phoenix Ariz. 1367 and Mrs. H. D. Sheppard Hanover Pa. 1308.

The defeated candidates were Mrs. William Henry Clapp of Cohocton, N. Y., who received 1,140 votes, and Mrs. Arthur Milton McCrillis, Providence, R. I., 1,229. There are 21 vice presidents general, seven of whom are elected each year.

Four of 13 honorary vice presidents general elected were Mrs. Robert J. Reed, of Wheeling, W. Va., 1,382 votes; Mrs. Charles B. Boothe, of South Pasadena, Calif., 1,220; Mrs. William W. Reynolds, Winston-Salem, N. C., 1,191, and Mrs. Ellet G. Drake, Beatrice, Nebr., 991.

Those eliminated were Mrs. William S. Shaw, of South Portland, Me., with 741 votes, and Miss Stella Pickett Hardy, of Little Rock, Ark., with 858.

Succeeds Mrs. Becker.

"Our efforts should be aimed at perfecting and balancing our program," said Mrs. Robert after her election.

The new president general succeeds Mrs. William A. Becker. "Robert's Rules of Order" were written by her husband's father and she and her husband revised them.

Members of Mrs. Robert's cabinet elected were:

Mrs. Loren Rex, of Wichita, Kans., chaplain general; Mrs. John S. Heaume, of Sprinfield, Ohio, recording secretary general; Mrs. William Kennedy Herrin, jr., of Clarksdale, Miss., corresponding secretary general; Mrs. George D. Schermerhorn, of Reading, Mich., organizing secretary general; Miss Page Schwarzwaelder, of Lake Mahopac, N. Y., treasurer general; Mrs. Frank Leon Nason, of Boston, Mass., registrar general; Mrs. Leland Stanford Duxbury, of Minneapolis, Minn., historian general; Mrs. Joseph Taylor Young, of Los Angeles, Calif., reporter general to the Smithsonian Institution; Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, of Winnetka, Ill., librarian general, and Mrs. Willard Steele, of Chattanooga, Tenn., curator general.

C. A. R. Stunt Party To Go Hula-less as Dancer Hurts Hip

There will be a hula dancer on the stage at the stunt program to be given by the Children of the American Revolution tonight, but there will be no hula dance.

A young lady member of the C. A. R., who is coming here from her home in Honolulu to participate in the annual convention, had promised to bring her grass skirt and appear in the show. Yesterday C. A. R. officials received a melancholy letter from her, announcing that she had fallen from her horse last week and injured her hip.

Roosevelt Tells D. A. R. That U. S. Will Remain a Free Republic

D. A. R.

sovereignty of the United States shall never be impaired.

"There have been former occasions at the conventions of the Daughters of the American Revolution when voices were needed to be raised for better national defense. This year you are raising those same voices and I am glad of it, but I am glad also that the Government of the United States can assure you today that it is taking definite, practical steps for the defense of the Nation."

President Roosevelt's first reference to national defense was at the beginning of his brief talk when a flashlight bulb exploded as the battery of news cameras clicked to photograph him with Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the D. A. R.

"Daughters of the American Revolution, I couldn't let a fifth year go by without coming to see you, and I must ask you to take me in a business suit," he said . . . and the flashlight popped. If some of the Daughters were startled, the President was not, and remarked with a smile, "I see you are still in favor of national defense."

Only One Tory Ancestor.

Explaining that he would have been at one or more of the conventions in prior years but for the time required to prepare a half-hour speech, he said he was proud to greet them as a Revolutionary descendant.

"I thought of preaching on a text but I won't. I will only give you the text and I won't preach on it. I think I can afford to give you the text because it so happens—through no fault of my own—that I am descended from a number of people who came over on the Mayflower. But more than that, my ancestors on both sides—and when you go back four generations or five generations it means 32 or 64 of them—every single one of them without exception was in this land in 1776.

"And there was only one tory among them.

"And so the text is this: Remember that all of us, you and I especially, are descended from immigrants and revolutionists.

"And I am particularly glad to know that today you are making this fine appeal to the youth of America. The importance of this rising generation to our sons and grandsons and great-grandchildren we can't overestimate; the importance of what we are doing in this year, in our own generation, to keep alive the spirit of American democracy, the spirit of opportunity, the kind of a spirit that has led us as a nation—not as a small group but as a nation—to meet the very great problems of the past.

Would Instruct the Young.

"We look for a younger generation that is going to be more American than we are. We are doing the best that we can, and yet we can do better than that: We can do more than that by inculcating in the boys and girls of this country today some of the underlying fundamentals, the reasons that brought our immigrant ancestors to this country, the reasons that compelled our revolutionary ancestors to throw off a Fascist yoke.

"And I am glad to have had an opportunity to come in this way and talk to you very simply and very sincerely. Perhaps sometime in the next two and a half years, I will have an opportunity to come here and make a prepared speech, but this kind of a party appeals to me. I am glad to have been with you, and I wish you lal the good luck in the world."

The session at which the President spoke was devoted to youth. Representatives of the Children of the American Revolution, the Junior American Citizens, Home Makers, Becker boys and girls, whom the organization helps with their educations and students of the D. A. R. approved schools all participated. Just before his entrance, the 300 pages, in their white dresses, marched in from the rear of the auditorium as "The Washington Post March" was played by the Marine Band Orchastra. Led by the Pennsylvania group, they formed a line across the back of the stage while the President spoke.

As the hour drew near for his arrival, those at the front of the auditorium divided their interest between the program and preparations for his coming. The red-coated musicians slipped into the orchestra pit, White House correspondents took their places in the press sections at the front of the hall and officials moved in and out. There was an air of excitement such as the Congress has not experienced for years.

When the President arrived, the flag was unfurled from the top of the auditorium as it had been the first night of the Congress.

The afternoon program was opened by the Potomac Orchestra, composed of members of the Potomac Society, C. A. R., of Washington, under the direction of John R. Riggleman, and the assembly call by Harvey Lee Huey, C. A. R. trumpeter, in cadet's uniform.

Little Children of the American Revolution from local societies, in colonial costume, marched across the stage and formed a background for the program. Carol Smith Allen, of New York, acted as narrator. The C. A. R. was represented by Sarah and Barbara Armstrong, of Dick Anderson Society, Alexandria, Va., who danced; Charles Bellows, one of the older members of the organization, who brought greetings as president of the Pennsylvania State Society; and Laura Elizabeth Whitaker, of Buffalo, who dressed in colonial costume, played a 'cello solo.

The Junior American Citizens—Robert Morris, Nathan Hale, Betsy Ross and George Washington clubs, of Washington—presented a pageant.

Students from the approved schools of the D. A. R., Tamassee in South Carolina and Kate Duncan Smith in Alabama, were next on the program and entertained with poise and ability, which delighted the D. A. R.'s. The hit of the afternoon was Mary Jo Hayes and Dorothy Ayres, of Kate Duncan Smith School, in an amusing dialogue, "So Sick," about their dolls' ailments. A quartet of girls from Tamassee School sang, accompanied on the dulimer, played by Pearl Coggins.

Representing the Girl Home Makers were Doris Backman, 4-H Club member, and Jean Keneston, Girl Scout, both of Connecticut, as well as Anna Banuzkewic, winner of the Home Makers Scholarship and a student at Massachusetts State College, in Amherst. Pasquali Finelli, of Pennsylvania, was presented as a representative of the Becker Boys.

Mrs. G. Harold Welch, Connecticut State chairman of the junior membership committee, talked briefly on the aims of the D. A. R. for its junior members. The juniors contributed to the program through two young women, Blanche Hubbard, harpist, and Irene Hubbard, cellist, organizing members of a Pennsylvania chapter, who were costume and played a group of eighteenth century classics.

Songs of 'Snow White' Pass Time for D. A. R.

While D. A. R. members were waiting last night for the votes for their national officers to be counted, they whiled away their time by singing, not patriotic airs, but the lilting music from "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

Led by Mrs. Charles C. Haig, retiring District regent, and by Mrs. Harold B. Gardner, a member of the Y. W. C. A. overseas entertainment service during the war, the Daughters went enthusiastically into the strains of "Whistle While You Work" and "Heigh Ho." Once, when it appeared that the votes never would be counted, they struck up "We Won't Be Home Until Morning."

D.A.R. Opposes May's Bill for Mobilization

Civilian Army Reserve of 75,000 and 'Big-Navy' Program Approved.

Opposition to the May mobilization bill, on the ground that it sets up "a virtual dictatorship over industry and labor," was expressed in a resolution adopted yesterday by the D. A. R.

The Daughters called upon Congress "to so amend the bill as to remove its objectionable features and assure the attainment of its original purpose" of "preventing profiteering in time of war and of equalizing the burdens of war."

The delegates adopted a resolution indorsing establishment of a civilian army reserve of 75,000 men, as provided in a pending bill. They also went on record as favoring the "big-navy" program, "designed for the peace and independence of the United States, and for the preservation of international law and order."

Summing up their attitude on foreign affairs, the D. A. R. voted "to continue to work for peace and order in the world through advocacy of reserved independence of action for the United States, supported by a national defense adequate for the maintenance of this position."

In another resolution, believed to be aimed at the "Ludlow war referendum," the delegates called upon the Senate to assume greater "responsibility for the conduct of foreign affairs," declaring that departure from the constitutional checks and balances "creates an uneasiness in the minds of the people."

The only resolution directly concerned with functions of the society itself was a motion approving the change in the official magazine's name from "Daughters of the American Revolution Magazine" to "National Historical Magazine."

Contrast In Taxes.

The rush of the Senate District Committee to report out a makeshift tax bill for Washington has gone for naught. That measure has not yet been called up on the Senate floor and there are indications that it may not be considered until next week. Since the committee had plenty of time to conduct hearings on the bill, it should have given the public a chance to be heard before reinserting the disguised sales tax, eliminated from the House bill after it had been thoroughly discredited.

Such a casual disposition of a vital measure by Senator King's committee makes it the more essential for the Senate as a body to analyze the shortcomings of this bill. In spite of all that has been said against sales taxes in Congress, the committee accepted that doubtful expedient as a means of avoiding a clash with the House over the local income tax. Of course, this particular sales levy is called by a different name. But that does not minimize the fact that it is a tax upon gross sales which, for the most part, will be paid by the public over shopping counters.

Before the Senate approves this regressive levy upon the poor it may profitably review the effects of sales and income taxes on various groups. A table worked out by the Citizens Committee on Fair Taxation graphically shows where the burden of each falls. For example, a married person with three dependents, having an income of $3,000, would pay no income tax, but his bill would be $19.20 under a 1 per cent sales tax. The same person with an income of $30,000 would pay only $90 under the sales tax and $588 under a local income tax computed at one-sixth of his Federal income tax payment.

The great advantage of the income tax is that it is levied in accord with ability to pay, which has come to be recognized as a cardinal principle of modern taxation. Is it possible that the Senate will renounce this principle simply because it is legislating for the District of Columbia?

It has been suggested that if the Senate lacks sufficient courage to reinsert the entire income tax section in the bill, it could substitute an income tax on corporations alone for the present gross sales tax. The estimated yields are similar. At least a corporate income tax would avoid some of the gross discrimination now encountered in the levy on gross turnover.

With very little effort the Senate could convert this bill from an unfair levy, bearing heaviest upon low income groups, to a much more equitable revenue measure.

Maturing Trade Unions.

The recurrence of labor troubles in Michigan, involving various locals of the United Automobile Workers, indicates that this union still has much to learn about the really effective methods of collective bargaining.

The C. I. O.'s unionization of the automobile industry was not a gradual development. Groups of workers hitherto disorganized were hastily brought together for purposes of collective bargaining and under the Wagner labor relations act were accorded legal protection against employer interference. It is not surprising that these mushroom growths should lack the stability and discipline required to hold their members and control their actions in times of stress and strain.

A natural sequel is the wholly illegal picketing of plants in automobile centers to prevent entry of union members who have failed to pay their dues. Disputes have also arisen because of alleged discrimination against union men, or because of company disregard of union rules. These disturbances, resulting in sporadic strikes and shutdowns, are evidence of the defective nature of the bargaining machinery established to assure peaceful negotiation of wage contracts.

Under present conditions, with declines in business resulting in dismissal of workers and loss of earnings, collective bargaining is subjected to a severe test. To managements secretly desiring to sabotage the system, numerous opportunities are presented. The unions, on the other hand, under pressure from within and without, are disposed to exaggerate the extent of their grievances and easily to suspect bad faith on the part of employers. Thus mutual suspicion and lingering hostility militate against maintenance of peaceful relations, especially in newly-organized industries.

Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, fortunately seems to be impressed with the importance of maintaining order and discipline in the ranks of his followers. He has taken a decisive stand against picketing of plants by union men detailed to collect dues. Furthermore, he has announced that local strikes will not be sanctioned by the central organization until all the methods of adjusting grievances required under contracts with the companies concerned have been exhausted.

Scrupulous observance on the part of unions of agreements previously made would not only deprive employers of all legitimate excuse for trying to undermine representative systems of collective bargaining, but would do much to convince employers that it is in their own interest to foster independent unionism. It is, therefore, encouraging that Mr. Martin has thrown his influence against a reversion to lawless methods which can only alienate public sympathy and arrest the growth of a responsible organization movement conducive to industrial peace.

Criticism Of The Press.

Criticism of the press has become almost a ranking national sport in recent years. And newspapers, it must be frankly admitted, lend themselves to criticism. They do so, among other reasons, by the very fact that their appeal is broad and not limited to any particular section of the population. One man's meat, in a democracy at any rate, is another man's poison. So it is natural that an expression of opinion which Mr. A masticates contentedly will by that token rise in the gorge of Mr. B.

It follows that many criticisms of the press completely cancel each other out. This is seen in two forms of attack which have been frequently leveled. One condemns newspapers for pandering to vulgar tastes by printing comic strips, pictures of bathing beauties, murder stories or other unexalted material which, for better or worse, the public in general likes to observe. The other form of reproach in mind is that leveled against a newspaper which criticizes a Presidential candidate who is later elected by a thumping majority.

In other words, when a newspaper caters to public taste in one direction it is depraved and when it does not cater to public taste in another direction it is corrupt. From the standpoint of the press this is the old army game. On heads it loses and on tails the critics win. But this is not news to newspapers.

What is news is that the American Society of Newspaper Editors, now holding its sixteenth annual convention in Washington, is this year taking up the cudgels in behalf of the Fourth Estate. And it was a well-reasoned defense of the profession which was made at the opening session yesterday by Alfred H. Kirchhofer, managing editor of the Buffalo Evening News and president of the A. S. N. E. Mr. Kirchhofer did not attempt to minimize the "shortcomings and limitations" of the press. But he gave equal emphasis to "the day by day and hour by hour effort freely poured into making better newspapers." It was time somebody paid that tribute.

The "black plague" of government censorship, Mr. Kirchhofer pointed out, now controls newspapers circulating to a total of some 300,000,000 people. For that huge proportion of the world's population all news, and editorial comment thereon, is strained through a filter designed to eliminate everything which is not politically servile. It is a procedure carefully calculated to make dictatorship a lasting and unchallenged doctrine.

There are, as Mr. Kirchhofer said, many "honest and objective critics" whom the press should heed. Being itself an organ of criticism, the newspaper must never resent the often helpful comments of readers who are properly irritated by factual inaccuracy, careless editing, meretricious thinking, or other journalistic failings. But there are also "critics who for personal or political advantage would help destroy the influence of the press if they could."

To the danger inherent in condemnation of this sort the public as well as the newspaper fraternity must be alert. For otherwise the obvious trend towards a more informative and a more reliable American press might quickly and disastrously be reversed.

Taxis Can Be Too Cheap.

After nearly eight years of delay, Congress is about to impose accident liability insurance on Washington's taxis. At least, House and Senate conferees have agreed on a bill which deserves the quick approval of both chambers.

The difference in regard to the insurance of taxi fleets, for which blanket policies or reserve funds had been suggested, has been resolved in favor of the individual owner-driver. Under the terms proposed, every cab in the city, regardless of ownership, will need a separate bond. If this plan proves uneconomic, it can be changed later. The important point is that Washingtonians be given the protection public carriers in virtually every other city offer as a matter of course. Since the local transit company has long been required to assume liability for its passengers, the bill promises as well to end an unwarranted economic advantage enjoyed by the taxis.

The new insurance may boost zone rates. This should not be unbearable, however. As it is, Washington cab fares are among the lowest in the country. But 20-cent rides have proved too much of a good thing, as will be testified by many who have found drivers legally but not financially responsible for personal or property injuries incurred.

Slums And Pump-Priming.

In announcing its first group of low-rental housing projects the United States Housing Authority particularly emphasized that 81 per cent of the new dwellings would be built on sites actually cleared of slums. No comparable statement is made in the current release concerning a much larger group of projects to cost a total of $40,728,635. Only one of these developments, that at Louisville, is to be located on a site now largely occupied by slums.

One reason for this difference in types of project is the inclusion of two New York housing developments in the group now announced. Slum property in the congested areas of New York is said to be held at such high prices that its purchase for rehousing is prohibitive. Under these conditions there seems to be no reasonable alternative to the choice of largely vacant sites. But outlying sites were also chosen in Augusta and Jacksonville.

The nature of these projects may not have been influenced by the Administration's plan of speeding up the slum clearance program. If Congress orders a sudden intensification of low-rental home building, however, it may be assumed that actual slum clearance will be subordinated to hasty construction of such projects on vacant land. As Administrator Straus of the USHA pointed out in his address on Wednesday night, "this work cannot be done in a day and done well." Genuine slum clearance is a long-term proposition that cannot safely be made responsive to the fluctuations of economic indices.

Following up President Roosevelt's request for additional funds to be spent through the USHA, Senator Wagner proposes that the sum this agency may obtain through bond issues should be doubled. "The authorized bond issue must be sufficient to commence a billion-dollar building program now," he said, "if we want actually to pay out from $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 between now and December 31." Obviously a slum clearance program cannot turn such handsprings without grave danger of departing from its original objective.

Nor is the time required for slum clearance the only argument for keeping this undertaking separate from any pump-priming ventures. Even if Congress decides to try this experiment once more, the cost of the priming fluid must be considered. Construction of low-rental dwellings under standards fixed by the USHA is a heavy expense to taxpayers. The average cost of housing a single family in the group of projects just announced, for example, is approximately $6,200.

Loans made to local authorities for the construction of these projects will ultimately be repaid to the Government. But the money to repay them will come largely out of annual Federal subsidies. That is a strange sort of project to use for pump-priming. It appears more so, when compared with what private enterprise is doing in the same field. Many projects financed by private capital through the Federal Housing Administration are much less expensive than the dwellings sponsored by the USHA for slum dwellers.

A modern community to be built in New York as a commercial enterprise will accommodate 15,000 families at a total cost of $50,000,000. That means an outlay of $3,333 per unit. The USHA projects in New York, heavily subsidized to accommodate slum dwellers, will cost almost twice that much per dwelling. That leaves no question as to what type of housing should be relied upon as a stimulus to employment.

No doubt the USHA could expedite its program to some extent without sacrificing the objectives which Congress wrote into the slum-clearance act. But that would not require more money. If the issue is between spending more money and eliminating the slums it is not clear why the latter objective should be abandoned.

An Alien Menace.

June brides and June buds continue to be popular but the reception being planned for June bugs is expected to be perfectly killing.

Elkton, Md. (hitherto specializing in brides) reports the placement of nine thousand Japanese beetle traps over forty square miles in Cecil County, traps and bait being free to farmers. The entire demonstration is expected to be in operation by June 10.

At the same time the Bureau of Entomology, co-operating with the State organizations of Georgia, Florida and Louisiana, has mapped an extensive campaign to wipe out the white-fringed beetle the moment it appears above ground, late in June. The little beasties will be treated to poison dust, flame throwers, oil, traps and starvation—all the interesting and delightful little doodads of civilized warfare.

Meantime a kind word has been said for the tent caterpillar. You don't have to burn him, says an expert. Let him alone. He is native born and Nature has already provided a perfect system of checks and counterchecks, a perfect balance between bird and grub. Which, of course, doesn't prevent you from giving special treatment to your pet apple tree.

But it's the alien bugs you have to look after. Some of the darned things didn't even bring along their own parasites.

We don't know how fast our car will run. And we don't know how far we could lean out of a tenth-story window without falling into the street.

Perhaps Prices Are Important

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In recent editorials you criticize and condemn President Roosevelt's policies for economic recovery. But, along with others who share your way of thinking, you offer no constructive alternative except to return to the system that produced the conditions existing in 1929 to 1933.

It may be, as you say, that the present program will not be effective, but to return to the policies that produced the wholesale destruction of values in 1929 can hardly be considered the correct answer and it seems clear to me that something new will have to be tried.

One of your chief arguments is that business should be relieved from the restrictive taxation that is preventing it from going ahead and furnishing employment for the unemployed, but your argument would be much more convincing if you would point out what taxes were restricting business in 1929.

Everyone seems to agree though that in order to achieve any degree of prosperity some plan must be devised that will provide employment for any man who wants to work and that his compensation should be ample to assure a decent living for him and his dependents.

There is a wide difference of opinion as to how this goal can be reached, but I think we can take a useful lesson from the recent past. Following the Administration's first pump-priming program, as you choose to call it, production rose to a high plane, in some industries the highest in history. But did that solve the unemployment problem? It did not, and that brings into the picture the old bugaboo, labor-saving machinery.

There can be no doubt that, due to the introduction of labor-saving devices during the past few years, industry produces too much with too few men and the contention by some propagandists that labor-saving machinery creates more jobs than it destroys just don't make sense.

You may be sure that any time there is a demand for goods, and goods can be sold, the goods will be produced regardless of the financial policy of the party in power.

It seems clear that employment stability can only be attained by some plan that will balance production and consumption and curb the use of so much labor-saving machinery. And it seems to me that the most plausible plan would be to levy an adequate tax on all labor-saving machinery and use the proceeds to finance useful public works that would furnish employment for any man willing to work and in this way compel the users of labor-saving machinery to pay for the unemployment that they create.

"It Is Awful."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of April 20, a Congressman's secretary deplores the fact that his boss is allowed 20 cents per mile for travel, even when it is not taken, and deplores the fact that he, the secretary is left out in the cold.

I wish to extend to this secretary my deepest sympathy in his very, very unfortunate position of having no taxpayers' money to meet traveling expenses. Since he was not drafted to the position which he holds, it is too bad that he must come all the way to Washington without travel allowance. Surely something will be done.

This thoughtful secretary has indirectly suggested a very noble thing. Just think of the thousands who come to Washington for Government service and must meet their own transportation charges. And when one takes into consideration temporary workers and probationers under civil service, who in many instances remain two, four or six months and must pay their way to Washington and return, the situation becomes very pitiful. It is tragic.

Private business, of course, pays the travel of workers from their homes to the place of employment, and here is the greatest government on earth refusing to do a thing so generous. It is awful.

Seriously: Although the law may allow it, the Congressman, who accepts transportation allowance and never uses it, is guilty of permitting public funds to be used for personal purposes, and in language a little more definite, it is, in my opinion, a form of stealing.

Little wonder that we have so much disregard for what the men on Capitol Hill enact into law.

Arguments Against District Suffrage.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with considerable pleasure to read that at a recent meeting of the Columbia Historical Society Mr. John Clagett Proctor gave a resume of the days when we had at the National Capital a territorial government complete with a Governor, a delegate in the House of Representatives and a House of Delegates of 44 members.

I was glad because 90 per cent of those now working for suffrage and the reenactment of such a form of government are not in possession of the facts. This I can vouch for, as in my arguments advanced against such, they plead ignorance and state they never knew such ever existed. Yes, it did exist from 1871 to 1874 and it became so corrupt and venal that for the first time in the history of the world a Republican Congress put out of existence a Republican government, and in making its get-away, these delegates decamped with everything in sight and the press of the city dubbed them the "Feather Duster Legislature" in consequence.

This House of Delegates occupied a hall on Pennsylvania avenue, between Ninth and Tenth streets, and out of the 44 delegates at that time, 29 were colored. The delegate in Congress, like all delegates from Territories, was not allowed to vote on any question of interest to the District. The House of Delegates was a marvel in its work, for on leaving office it left a debt of $39,000,000 on the taxpayers of the city, hence the deserved action of Congress in abolishing this state of affairs and installing the splendid commission form of government we now live under without the least bit of scandal in all the years it has been running.

Of course, the advocates of suffrage now prancing up and down, are those who are ignorant of what the District suffered. Naturally they argue that things now are different, that a better class of citizens are among us and that they could be trusted to act differently.

Let's see, just previous to the last Presidential election, the two dominant parties had District chairmen representing them in matters of politics for the good of said parties. Both allegedly took care to have voting places where candidates would be placed in nomination and voted on to represent the city in the two party conventions. Yet in our fine city of over 500,000 people, the Democrats polled less than 300 people. On the other hand, the Republicans held their primaries in private homes and no result was obtained. It was claimed that one district elected a candidate to a position but, not being favored by the clique, he was ousted.

This illustrates the desires of the two parties for suffrage, and is the best argument to continue our clean and splendid government as it exists today—the commission form—where everyone can get an honest hearing.

JOHN HADLEY DOYLE.
Washington, April 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent the referendum planned for the near future, it seems to me that the advocates of votes for the District approach the subject from a narrow angle, or as if Washington was the Capital of the District of Columbia and not the Capital of the whole United States, in which all citizens of the country should have just pride.

If there is to be a referendum it would seem that it should be Nation-wide and after all of the people are apprised of the mixed character of the urban population of the District, of which little or nothing is known to them. The writer has lived in or around Washington all his life and he apprehends that the vote for the District would be the very worst thing that could happen to the Capital City.

I know that in the recent past on days of national elections mock booths were established in certain sections of the city bearing symbols of mourning associated with the slogan, "The Day of Our Humiliation." I deeply feel that these past occasions were not the days of our humiliation, but the day the vote is obtained will be that day.

The answer by some on the referendum point will be that the referendum is for the enlightenment of Congress, the representatives of the people, and that their acts will reflect the wishes of the people as a whole. Not so. The members of Congress know little or nothing of the population of Washington, except what they see in going between their homes and offices. They should consult with and apprise their constituents upon this momentous question before lending their aid in changing their Capital to a place of derision rather than pride.

I know of no sound argument in favor of District suffrage. An experiment has been tried and the scheme was a failure, and under present conditions, it would be greater now.

VIGILANT.
Chevy Chase, Md., April 12.

A Question Of Realism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I don't blame The Post for being resentful when it is referred to as a Republican newspaper. But it seems you do oppose every item of the Administration's economic policy.

Replying editorially to a reader who takes exception to "unjust criticism" of the President's spending program you present your idea of "The Essentials of Recovery;" and defend the aforesaid criticism as just.

You premise that the President's agenda "is discredited in advance of trial" by the Nation's "recent experiences" with an artificially engendered recovery movement.

The Administration's "planned economy" you charge with the "current reverses" and, lacking space—or something—to substantiate the charge, you go on to the "logical" conclusion that the President's program is bad.

Then you repeat the pontifical dictum that substantially to lighten the capital gains levy and eliminate the profits tax would be an "aid to business."

But, opposed to the spending proposal of money which must be paid back in the future, you advocate higher railroad rates which would have to be paid now. Thus you ignore the experience of stimulated travel and increased revenue on low rates.

One of your essentials of recovery is for the President to grapple "realistically with the problems to which reference has been made." But some of us think that the very realism of Roosevelt's course in behalf of the greatest good for the greatest number has made some folks hate Roosevelt.

Escape To The Country.

PERHAPS the ever-increasing bombardment of door-to-door and telephone soliciting in Washington has driven you to the point of considering the possibility of seeking solitude in the country. If so, it might be well before you give up your apartment and pack your belongings for you to read this report of one who made a magnificent gesture of escape just about this time last spring.

My husband and I were primed for a period of intensive writing and after years of harassment in Washington and New York, decided that the country was the place for us. Not content with the chances of seclusion in a nearby suburb or on one of the flowering hillsides of Virginia or Maryland, we journeyed 1,900 miles to a farm which my grandfather had cleared in the wilds of north Texas in 1846. Here, I felt sure, there would be no interruptions.

I would scarcely get my hat off in my Georgetown apartment before the procession would start banging on my door, cleverly timing their arrival to coincide with the return of the Government workers. And when I resigned from the Government to resume writing, I soon concluded that Washington was not the place to do it. Forty-three interruptions in one day, including visits from a Black Foot Indian, who said that he was trying to get back to Oklahoma and wanted me to contribute to his railroad fare, and a woman with flaming eyes who peered at me through a crack in the door and demanded: "Do you know that Armageddon is at hand?" precipitated the decision.

* * * *

It was a good idea; the only trouble was that the solicitors had reached Texas ahead of us. The first day I tried to write in my ground-floor study I had a nightmarish sensation that we had acted as unwilling Pied Pipers and brought all of the solicitors with us from Washington. In my panic I overlooked the fact that solicitors are specialists; the country salesmen have a technique all their own. Among other things, they seat themselves comfortably on your front porch and seem to feel that they've come a long way and, now that they've arrived, are entitled to something bordering on a week-end vacation.

Not only are the solicitors in the country as numerous as those in the city, but they are a particularly hardy breed, strengthened by life in the great outdoors, with hands strong enough and apparently eager to hammer down anything less substantial than cast iron. Perhaps our most persistent visitor was a man who wanted to install a new heating system; he arrived with the regularity of the mail and with the same disregard of the weather.

But there were other men who wanted to sell everything from silver polish to vacuum cleaners; young women selling sunbonnets and old women selling books; people wanting to buy old gold trinkets and scrap iron. And when there might otherwise be a lull in the confusion, there is always someone taking a census—how many guns are there in the house and what kind of shells are used—and representatives of the State old age pension board checking on the statements of ancient Negroes as to their length of residence in the community and degree of debility, or the ancient Negroes, themselves, requesting former employers to "sign dem papers" so that they can get pensions.

On the occasions when my writer-husband was left at the mercy of the solicitors, I returned to find a weird collection of articles piled beside his desk: needles, thread, brushes, mops, brooms, calendars, artificial flowers, cooking utensils, cotton lace, roasting ears and green peaches. He proceeds on the theory that he will buy anything up to a quarter, without argument, and save money by paying this bribe to get back to his typewriter. Of course this is weak-kneed male behavior, and undue encouragement of solicitors, as I pointed out until one day I was worried into buying a table cloth, guaranteed antique filet—price $13.

But it was an interruption in the name of sweet charity, and via the telephone, which served as the final straw. I was working toward a dead-line, without a second to spare. For as long as possible I closed my mind to the fact that the telephone was ringing. Maybe the: would hang up; maybe the person at the other end of the line would drop dead. Neither happened; the telephone just kept on ringing.

"I am calling to remind you," said an unknown voice, dripping with the milk of human kindness, "that tomorrow is Smile Day."

"Is what?" I stammered, trying frantically to hang onto my last sentence, which I hadn't had time to write down.

"Is Smile Day." The tone suggested that its owner was addressing a not-too-bright child. "Our annual Smile Day. Please put all of your old clothes in a bag on your front porch, not later than 2 o'clock. A Boy Scout will pick them up for distribution to our local poor."

"I'm in the country," I screamed, "and the Boy Scout won't come by here and besides . . ." But she had hung up, with a nice lady-like click, to join her fellow club members in calling all the names in the telephone directory, without regard to city limits. And I was left staring at the telephone, my sentence gone and by blood pressure rising alarmingly.

We have returned to Washington where we can at least have some metropolitan compensations for our interruptions.

Cut-Rate Civilization.

WE WILL now hear once again the fine-haired constitutional reason why it would be dangerous to our liberties, to the integrity of the States, the sacred heritage of Valley Forge and the virtue of American womanhood to extend the Federal income tax to the salaries of State, county and municipal employes and the State income taxes to the salaries of Federal employes residing in States which have this tax.

PEGLER.

Mr. Roosevelt himself, who is included among those who have obtained their civilization at a cut rate for many years, has openly indorsed this program. Nobody ever has offered any objection to the proposition that the great army of partial and total deadheads should be compelled to pay in proportion to their income, the same as the rest of us. As Governor of New York and as a member of the Legislature before that, Mr. Roosevelt was not required to pay the Federal income tax on his public pay. As President, at a high salary, he has been exempt from the New York State tax, which is a honey that would have cost him about $7,500 a year these last six years.

• • • •

HOWEVER, it must be said that Mr. Roosevelt has now taken the stand against the Annie Oakley privilege inherent in public office. He gets a star on his report card for that, but only a silver star, not a gold one, because the idea never occurred to him that he, too, had been thumbing his way at the expense of his fellow citizens until he made his crack about taxes being the price that we pay for civilization and about some people's inclination to ride half fare and was brought to a sudden realization that, for much of his adult life, he had been riding his thumb himself.

In opposition to the President's current proposal it is argued that to tax public salaries, drawn out of the public kitty and derived from the taxes of the rest of us, would be to diminish those salaries and impose a Federal tax on the functions of the States and a State tax on the agencies of the Federal Government.

It would do nothing of the kind. After a public official has drawn his pay the money is his. It is just as fair game for the tax collector as any other person's pay. By the same argument, the income tax, levied on a citizen in private employment, could be regarded as a tax on that citizen's employer. By the same reasoning, any stickup man or gyp who hoisted any parasite on the Federal pay roll in New York or Louisiana or swindled him with an Arkansas diamond could be accused of an offense against the United States Treasury.

THAT IS ALL there is to the objection. It goes back to a Supreme Court decision in 1819, long before the income tax was thought of, which held that the Federal Government could not tax the States and vice versa. That principle is not involved in this proposal. It is childish to argue that a tax on a Governor's salary is a tax on the State treasury from which he draws the money. If so, then a tax on John Lewis' salary of $25,000 a year is a tax on the exempt treasury of the United Mine Workers and, if paid, should be refunded. If so, then a tax on Charlie Schwab's salary and bonuses is a tax on his company which can show that it has already paid all the taxes which it is subject to.

But it simply is not so, and if Congress does not affirm its intention to levy on the salaries of the five million and more public employes drawing billions in pay, then the income tax is a punishment on private industry and work. The Governor of New York draws $25,000 a year and husky perquisites, free of Federal income tax. Another New York citizen getting $4,000 a year is taxed. The Governor's $500 a week is held to be State money and therefore untaxable after it has been paid into his bank account. The citizen's $80 a week is held to be his own and therefore taxable as soon as he has received his eight $10 bills on pay night.

The Once Over

Speaking of Beer.

America has had beer back for five years. And it's still hard to find a bartender who knows how to draw it.

• • • •

Five years ago this year the country got through with home brew and whatever it was they sold in speakeasies as lager, but it seems only yesterday that every cellar had a strong odor of hops and our best citizens were devoting most of their home life to the bottling business.

• • • •

Remember the old cry that if the consuming public could only get light wines and beer back it wouldn't want hard likker? Boy, how the results have shown that one up!

• • • •

Remember the folks who used to argue by the hour that they would be satisfied with beer? Whatever became of 'em, anyhow?

Incidentally, whatever became of the promise to restore the 5-cent glass of beer?

• • • •

And has anybody seen one of those old-fashioned half-quart goblets that used to hold the biggest glass of beer in town for a nickel in the prewar days?

• • • •

All the scouts representing this department report that most places are serving lager in wine glasses.

• • • •

The glass of beer you get as a general thing today wouldn't have wet the mustache of an old-time beer lover. He would have thought it an insult to his capacity.

• • • •

They sometimes made the whisky glasses smaller in the old days, but a beer glass was always a beer glass and no weakling could lift it.

• • • •

Drawing a beer was an art. A good bartender who knew his stuff made a ceremony of it. He took pains with it. It had to flow just right, have life to it and show the proper amount of suds. He wasn't a very fancy looking fellow and nobody accused him of having "umph," but the bartender of yesterday knew better than to serve a customer a glass of flat, lifeless beer that had all the appeal of a nice drink of last season's rain.

• • • •

What do these modern barboys think that beer is, anyhow? Something to wet postage stamps with?

And the years all back again.

Kerensky Says Weakened Russia Cannot Fulfill Her Duties.

Dictator Is Hoping for World Revolution, Foe Declares.

Alexander Kerensky, head of the Russian provisional government of 1917, who spoke off-the-record at a National Press Club luncheon yesterday, asked for an interview on the situation in Russia, issued the following statement:

"I venture to assume that you understand how difficult it is for me to speak of the Russia of today. There are times when every true patriot would like to conceal the horrible wounds of his country from the eyes of foreigners.

"Such silence, however, would be weakness on my part. For the sake of the speediest possible convalescence of Russia it is necessary that the outside world know the truth about her. And knowledge of the truth about Russia will help foreign public opinion to find the true road to the restoration of internal peace and the general welfare.

"Whether well or ill, Russia remains a cardinal factor in the life of the world, and a great deal of what may happen in Europe and in the Far East depends, and will continue to depend, even more upon what happens in my country.

"The utilization of Russia's tremendous masses of human beings and raw materials as a factor of peace was always the purpose that guided Russian democracy. But it is a very great illusion to depend upon the world's most cruel dictatorship, as a bulwark of peace and democracy, simply because that dictatorship happens to have its seat in Russia. The triumph of Hitler is the price which European democracy has paid for that illusion. . . .

"For many years world democracy was fed upon fairy tales about 'the most democratic country in the world,' about 'the classless Socialist state,' about the 'remarkable economic achievements of the proletariat, that had become complete master of a great empire.'

"But suddenly there came an end to all these illusions. In August, 1936, a group of Lenin's closest collaborators, 'the creators of October,' including Zinoviev and Kamenev, were executed. Since then, one after another of the outstanding leaders of Lenin's proletarian revolution have taken their place in the defendants' dock. One after another they have 'wholeheartedly' confessed and been compelled to face the firing squad as German agents and Japanese spies. . . .

"There has ensued, in consequence, a paradoxical situation: foreigners today can continue to maintain friendly or business relations with the Soviet government only if they do not believe that the executed Red generals, Stalin's ministers and diplomats of yesterday, were a pack of scoundrels. But the official Soviet representatives abroad are trying desperately, as was done recently by the Soviet Ambassador to the United States, to convince foreigners that all the accusations against the Rykovs and Tuchachevskys are absolutely true.

Reports of Trials Reveal Situation.

"Of course, Tuchachevsky was not a Hitler spy. Of course, Bucharin did not betray the Russian workers and peasants to Japan. Nevertheless, the Moscow trials, which have so astonished you, had a great significance, for they disclosed the truth about the very nature of the Bolshevik dictatorship. And it is not difficult to perceive this truth. All you have to do is to read carefully the official reports of the Rykov-Bucharin, Piatakov-Sokolnikov and Kamenev-Zinoviev trials. The generals, as you know, were executed secretly, and no official report of their trial is available. . . .

"You will perceive, first, that the mad attempt to establish in Russia a bureaucratic economy of serfdom by means of successive five-year plans has paralyzed all the creative powers of the country and wrecked its agriculture, industry and transport. Secondly, you will perceive that, stifling in the grip of terror and poverty, the country is seeking a way out, liberation. . . . The acuteness of the crisis through which the dictatorship in Russia is now passing may be gleaned from this fact:

"Today Stalin is resorting in the struggle with his opponents to the very measure which he himself, in accordance with the advice given by Lenin to his party, had only previously most resolutely rejected.

"At the Fourteenth Congress of the Communist Party (1925) there developed a sharp conflict between the left proletarian wing of the party and the so-called peasant tendency represented by Bucharin and Rykov. Zinoviev and Kamenev demanded merciless extermination of Bucharin. Stalin firmly opposed this. He said:

"'We do not agree with Zinoviev and Kamenev because we know that the policy of cutting heads is pregnant with grave dangers for the party, that the method of bloodletting—and it is blood that they demand—is contagious. Today we will behead one, tomorrow another; what, then, will remain of the party?' . . .

ALEXANDER KERENSKY.

"That was how Stalin spoke 12 years ago. Today we know something else: Not only has Bucharin's blood been shed, but also the blood of all those who had demanded it. And the latter were first to perish. Why has Stalin brought his terror to such mad extremes precisely in this period of 'the most democratic constitution in the world?'

"The answer to this question we find in the official reports of the celebrated Moscow trials. The highest administrators of heavy industry were executed because this industry is functioning very badly, because catastrophic accidents in mines have reached an immeasurable total, because the workers are living under impossible conditions and their work capacity is being constantly diminished.

"The highest administrators of transport and scores of leading railway engineers were executed because of the thousands of catastrophic wrecks that have occurred annually on the railways, because the rolling stock is no good, because the river transport is unable to handle the movements of grain, lumber and building materials.

Leaders Executed For Nation's Chaos.

"The administrators of the government co-operatives have been executed because the bureaucratically organized retail trade is in a state of complete chaos.

"The minister of finance was executed because unbearable taxes must be collected from the population by means of merciless terror, which is provoking profound resentment and resistance in the villages.

"Finally, and most important of all, the commissar of agriculture, with many of his subordinates, have been executed because the system of forcible collectivization, which has brought back the old Russian serfdom, has completely wrecked the agriculture of the U. S. S. R.

"Commissar of Agriculture Chernov was executed because, with the aid of subordinates, he had sabotaged crop sowing, destroyed harvests and poisoned cattle.

"What is the truth behind this obviously ridiculous accusation? Here is the source of Russia's tragedy of today. As early as 1928 there was acute discontent in the villages and shortage of food in the cities. The economic concessions made by Lenin at the time of the terrible famine of 1921, known as the NEP (New Economic Policy) had proved inadequate. The Communist dictatorship had found it necessary either to move forward from economic to political reforms or to stop, by means of terror, the normal evolution of the country, to repeat the experiment of the integral communism of 1918-1920.

Internal Struggle Over New Concessions.

"There began within the Communist Party an internal struggle between the supporters of Stalin and those of Rykov. Already at that time Rykov had insisted upon additional concessions to the country, particularly to the peasants. At that time Stalin supported himself upon the proletarian portion of the party, upon the enthusiasm of the hot-headed Communist youth. He declared that by making concessions to the demands of the country the Bolsheviks would be compelled to liquidate their dictatorship. We have no possibility of peaceful development, Stalin said in reply to Rykov. We have missed the time-period of concessions. We must, like Bolsheviks, gnash our teeth and, reforming our lines, move forward to the objective set by Lenin.

"But what was the objective set by Lenin to which Stalin referred? It was the world proletarian revolution. But the road to the proletarian revolution required, first and foremost, that the enemy within—the peasantry—be crushed. For, as Trotsky said at that time, "a well-fed village constitutes the gravest peril to the secure existence of the proletarian dictatorship. Such dictatorship has been one of the Kremlin oligarchy over the Russian proletariat and peasantry . . .

"The consequence has been that millions of peasants found themselves in concentration camps, many hundreds of thousands perished of executions and epidemics; a new wave of abandoned children swept over Russia. Fighting against the restoration of serfdom, the peasants, during the very first few months of the collectivization, destroyed more than half of the country's horses, nearly half of the cattle, two-thirds of the sheep and goats, an innumerable number of pigs. About four million human beings perished in the famine of 1933 in the Ukraine alone. . . .

"Never will the Russian peasantry and the population of Russia as a whole become reconciled to the Stalin dictatorship.

Restored Confidence Is Prime Problem.

"The question of how to secure a piece of bread and regain confidence in tomorrow has become for each inhabitant the sole, fundamental question in the U. S. S. R.—a question demanding immediate solution.

"Upon the solution of this question depends not only the personal welfare of the population. Upon it depends also Russia's capacity for defense of her frontiers, her ability to become a factor for the maintenance of international peace. The extreme inner weakness of Russia, only too well known in Berlin and Tokyo, constitutes the basic reason for the events in China and central Europe.

"The speediest possible abandonment of the terrorist dictatorship in Russia is an urgent necessity, not merely the product of emigre dreams. The latest Rykov-Bucharin trial has demonstrated that this is also the conviction of very many in the government machine itself and in the higher circles of the army. . . .

"In 1936 Stalin gave the impression of supporting Bucharin's idea of a new demdcratic constitution and the program of the army leaders to restore a sense of healthy patriotism and a return to the road of creative national effort.

"Why did this brief period of liberal policy on the part of Stalin end so quickly in a new outbreak of uncontrollable terror and the execution of the chief proponents of the policy? . . . I believe that Stalin realized that reconciliation with the country was impossible after all that he had done. And, most important of all, I believe that the rising prospects of a new world war had rekindled in Stalin the hope that a new world war was inevitable; that this new world war would, in accordance with Lenin's original conception, be transformed into a world class-war, that is, a proletarian world revolution . . .

Dictatorship Not Passively Tolerated.

"The dictatorship, which has demonstrated its own incapacity for salutary change, must be abolished for the sake of the economic and political liberation of Russia. The endless executions and the presence of five million human beings in concentration camps give evidence that the people of the U. S. S. R. are by no means passively tolerating the terrorist government. . . .

"In general, the official report of the Rykov-Bucharin trial furnishes convincing evidence of the present situation.

"This report discloses that Bucharin and Rykov testified that in trying to bring about reforms in domestic policy they had tried to help avert defeat from without. As Vishinsky blurted out in an unguarded moment: They wanted to present the situation before the workers and peasants of our country, before all our people, in such a way as to prove that it was not they but someone else who opened the front.' (Izvestia, March 12.)

"Who was the someone else? Who? Obviously, he who by his policy of wrecking the army, destroying the diplomatic corps and exterminating the technical intelligentsia has also wrecked the international authority of the U. S. S. R. and compelled both the enemies and friends of Russia to revise radically their conception of the fighting power of the Red army. From the same stenographic report of the Rykov-Bucharin trial we can also determine clearly the program of the anti-Stalin opposition within the party itself. This program is not Trotskyism, but its direct opposite.

"'I fought principally against the policy of the party with respect to the peasantry,' testified Rykov. (Izvestia, March 5.)

"Bucharin (Izvestia, March 8) gave a more detailed presentation of the program.

Support of Russian People Is Duty of Democracy.

"'Our actual program,' he testified, 'may be said to have been a gradual return to bourgeois-democratic liberty, to coalition, because from the block with the Mensheviks and socialists-revolutionists emerges freedom of parties.'

"As one of the defendants testified, Bucharin, in conversations, has always 'compared the collectives with serfdom' and 'repeated his old, well-known thesis about the military feudal exploitation of the peasantry.' . . .

"In fact, the abolition of the new serfdom in Russia constitutes the program not only of the anti-Stalin opposition within the Communist Party, within the government machine, but of the whole of Russia, and I believe that this should also be the desire of free public opinion in all democratic countries, without exception. For without the restoration of Russia's economic might and of her political liberty there can be no hope of restoring equilibrium in Europe and in the Pacific, of bringing mankind back to the road of peace and general welfare. . . .

"In struggling for their liberation, the Russian people are performing a twofold duty; a duty to their own country and the whole of mankind.

"The duty of world democracy is to support morally the Russian people, who are fighting to bring to an end the Stalin dictatorship—the chief source of world reaction."

Labor Schism

By Frank M. Kleiler.

An Eyewitness History.

A NEWSPAPERMAN'S VERSION of the schism and upheaval of American organized labor is presented in "Labor on the March" by Edward Levinson. It is full of human interest yarns and personality sketches. For general readers the book is a first-class summary of all the important labor events and developments in the last five years. For the A. F. of L. executive council and officers of affiliated unions it is a penetrating criticism of their 50-year-old policies. For C. I. O. adherents it is an exhilarating tale of achievements.

Full blame for the quarrel between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. is laid to the stand-pat craft unionists, who Mr. Levinson says, are simply fighting to protect the jurisdictional claims they staked out for themselves in gold-miner fashion. Messrs. Green, Woll, Frey, Hutcheson and Tobin are chided as a group of die-hards desperately "attempting to hold the fort against the onrush of new leaders and new policies." Messrs. Lewis, Howard, Dubinsky and Hillman are especially lauded among the new leaders "who have stormed the ramparts, made effective advances and brought about the greatest labor upheaval the American Nation has known."

Mr. Levinson traces the origin of the C. I. O.-A. F. of L. controversy back to the deathbed of Samuel Gompers, when the federation president murmured weakly to James Duncan, octogenarian president of the granite cutters' union: "I have kept the faith. Tell them I expect them to keep the faith." Craft unionism was "the faith" to which Gompers referred, writes Mr. Levinson, and the union presidents kept it by protecting their, "proprietary interests" in the crafts to which they belonged.

THE NRA DAYS and events leading up to the historic Atlantic City convention of 1935 which immediately preceded the birth of the C. I. O. are interpreted in terms of the horizontal versus vertical theory of union structure. With an abundance of direct quotations from the key figures in the affairs, the author emphasizes the extreme reluctance of the craft unionists to organize the unorganized workers in the mass production industries and the obstacles put in the way of those who tried to organize the steel, automobile and rubber plant employes in industry-wide unions at low rates of dues.

As labor editor of the New York Post, Mr. Levinson attended many of the meetings and witnessed the struggles which he describes; his reports may be accepted as accurate. He is a bit shaky, however, on his second-hand history of earlier events. His analysis of Gompers' "voluntarism" appears to be shaped to support his notion that old-line leaders of the federation are essentially autocrats interested in personal aggrandizement. He fails to direct attention to the considerations which made the Gompers group regard "voluntarism" or "antigovernmentalism" as expedient a half century ago. Although he does not attempt to debunk the "Grand Old Man of American Labor," the author does not credit Gompers with the idealism and breadth of vision which were the main sources of his influence.

The book contains a good appraisal of John L. Lewis, and it derides the popular belief that the C. I. O. chieftain is potentially a dictator. "The power Lewis allegedly wields over his followers," writes Mr. Levinson, "is puny compared, say, with the authority of a big business man in his own establishment; or the power one of these does not hesitate to use when he is in a position to deal with competitors. For a Ford, a Weir or a Girdler to denounce Lewis as a despot is so ridiculous it needs only to be stated to reveal it."

THE AUTHOR BELIEVES that Mr. Lewis is without presidential ambitions for 1940. He argues:

"Lewis would not be a candidate because it is not in the cards for him to be a labor President. Even before President Roosevelt turned away from the 'Little Steel' strikers, Lewis knew that public office—the presidency in particular—cannot at this stage of American affairs be the unconditioned property of labor. Lewis is the chief spokesman of labor; in the White House he could no longer be that. While a labor President, backed by a majority in Congress could make great contributions toward winning security for labor's millions, a President dependent on the support of other strata of the population would have to heed various pressures. To be the leader of an aggressive, growing labor movement makes Lewis far more serviceable to the working people than to be a captive in the White House."

As an eye-witness record of these years when American industry and unionism are undergoing significant changes, "Labor on the March" is a good contribution to the literature of labor. Historians in future years will find it a source for important material. Undoubtedly they will improve upon it when the lapse of years makes possible a study of the results and full implications of what is happening today. For the present, however, it should perform a valuable function in dispelling misunderstanding and ignorance concerning the current issues.

The World Of Letters

VLADIMIR PIZITZ, second assistant bookkeeper of Random House, returned yesterday on car number 079 of the B. M. T. from a tour of Brooklyn and Flatbush, where he saw several important authors and discussed their new books with them. Pizitz brought back with him the manuscript of Phyllis Lockjaw's new volume of poetry, for which the publishers have tried for two years to break the contract, the first four chapters of a book on Vermont by the last native of that State to write a book about it, and several copies of newspapers that he stumbled over in the subway. "It's finding things accidentally like that that spells the romance in publishing," said Mr. Pizitz. He reported that the book business in Flatbush was booming, discounted talk of war in Brooklyn this summer, and concluded that the Dodgers would be lucky to finish seventh again.

Mr. Hillary received a copy of the Greek edition, specially inscribed by Gregory Stanlikopuloff, the famous Athenian publisher. "This will be Greek to you," wrote the inimitable Stanlikopuloff, a collection of whose wittisisms and epigrams will be published by Random House this fall.

The Federal Diary

$100 Cache.

Congratulations to a former Federal employe and renowned stamp collector, who went into an old album the other day for one fond glance at his stamps. There, to his big-eyed pleasure, were war savings stamps to the tune of $100. He'd forgotten all about them, he claims—which at least would place him in the category of a most unusual man.

Coincidence, or was it extra sensory perception: At the Missouri State Society the other night (thanks to Roy Miller, of Agriculture, for the invitation) there arose between two Federal people a massive controversy over what portions of the Chinese people go in strongly for rice eating. On that day (we learn now) the Federal Government was issuing a statement on the subject.

• • • •

A Commerce Department authority, upsetting popular notions, said that 150,000,000 Chinese seldom eat rice. According to Ruth Spicer, of Commerce, the reason is that rice is too expensive for large portions of the population north of the Yangtze Valley and is eaten only on festive occasions. Millet is the staple food of these people, she said. But it is still queer why the Government and two waltzers at the Missouri party should be thinking the same thing and a thing that concerned neither of them any too much . . .

Action.

At this moment come tidings that the stout and reliable old A. F. G. E. has rung the bell again! They have extracted from Gen. Hines a promise of something which he (personally) has wanted long to do, viz: correct conditions in the Veterans Administration's facilities. He assures that studies will be made promptly; that the institution of the 44-hour week for attendants may be instituted by July 1, 1939; that civil service status for attendants is in the planning—all of this is his expressed desire, he tells the A. F. G. E.

Specifically, he has appointed a committee to study: Cost of an 8-hour tour of duty. Optional QSL. Relieving food handlers of compulsory subsistence charges. Revaluation of allowances, and civil service status for certain attendants, or all of them. He thinks that periodic salary increases are desirable, but, of course, must be kept within limits of appropriations. Nowhere in the letter is there a definite commitment as to when the reforms may be executed, but that a full-feathered study will get under way and promptly is sufficient cause for jubilation on the part of V. A. people and those outsiders who have agonized, if not actually wept, over the status quo.

A Congressman informs us that never in his long career on the Hill has he received as many letters requesting jobs as beset him now. The sheer number of these appeals, he states, is both burdensome and overwhelming and distracting of his attention from legislative duties. And this brings the solemn thought (in line with an old argument of ours) that the people don't care so much about a merit system as some would have us believe. And, tragically almost, the only relief from the spoils system must come through the people themselves. And the people writing in, in burdensome, overwhelming numbers, for spoils jobs! Maybe you have the answer.

Roosevelt Sees 200 U.S. Editors At White House

State of Union Discussed; Kirchhofer Hits Back at Critics of Press.

President Roosevelt and 200 editors—members of the American Society of Newspaper Editors—got together at the White House last night and talked about the state of the union. What was said, however, never will be set in type. It was an informal, off-the-record interview.

The sixteenth annual convention of the A. S. N. E. started off yesterday at the National Press Club with Alfred H. Kirchhofer, managing editor of the Buffalo Evening News and president of the society, striking back at critics of the American press.

"It is an anomaly," he said, "that at a time of greater competition in news dissemination than ever before, the circulation of American newspapers is at an all-time high and that increasing criticism is being directed at these self-same newspapers.

"Doesn't Make Sense."

"It doesn't make sense unless you accept the thesis that the masses are looking to these newspapers for competent, honest and courageous leadership. In other lands dictators who establish propaganda bureaus think it is enough if they know. Here the people must know and understand.

"It is our responsibility not only to be concerned about what we print, but about presenting it so there will be more certainty that it is read and understood.

"We recognize better than most of our critics the reasonable shortcomings and limitations of newspapers, but we also know better than our critics the day-by-day and hour-by-hour effort freely poured into making better newspapers.

"Too often we may with human frailty fall short of the standards which we set for ourselves, but there need be no fear that the press of America doesn't reflect the common point of view. It is to the glory of the press, rather than to its discredit, that it represents stable, responsible thought, in place of the irresponsibility of the soap box."

Referring to those critics who say that the press cannot serve the public honestly because it operates under the profit system, Kirchofer said:

"I assert it can only serve the public well because it does. We must make it clear to the public that there is a greater guarantee for freedom of thought in financial independence than in political servility."

Kirchofer asserted the old saying of the Romans, "Words fly; written things remain," still is true, and while radio has a niche of its own it cannot displace the newspaper.

Directors Nominated.

W. S. Gilmore, of the Detroit News, chairman of the nominating committee, reported the following ten members nominated for six places on the board of directors, as follows:

Edson K. Bixby, of the News-Leader, Springfield, Mo.; J. Roscoe Drummond, Christian Science Monitor; J. N. Heiskell, The Gazette, Little Rock, Ark.; Nathaniel R. Howard, The News, Cleveland, Ohio; Dwight Marvin, The Record, Troy, N. Y.; Burrows Matthews, The Courier-Express, Buffalo, N. Y.; Talbot Patrick, the News-Argus, Goldsboro, N. C.; J. Charles Poe, The News, Chattanooga, Tenn.; D. J. Sterling, The Journal, Portland, Oreg., and Casper S. Yost, of the Globe-Democrat, St. Louis. The directors will elect the president and other officers.

Secretary M. V. Atwood, Treasurer Marvin and Membership Chairman Bixby reported the society had 238 members, highest number in its history, and more than $5,000 in the treasury, also a new high.

A report by Stuart H. Perry, of the Adrian (Mich.) Telegram, on co-operation between the press, bar and radio, was caught in a parliamentary tangle, and publication of it was delayed until today.

The editors will have a round-table breakfast discussion at 8:30 a. m. today at the Willard, and at 11 a. m. will go to the State Department for an off-the-record talk with Undersecretary Sumner Wells.

At a luncheon in the National Press Club at 1 p. m., Mark M. Jones, consulting economist and prominent figure in the business world, will talk "off the record" on "Labor in Europe vs. Labor in the United States."

This will be followed at 2:30 by a "clinic" on newspaper problems, which will be open only to members of the society. Among the speakers will be Dr. James R. Conant, president of Harvard University; Harold L. Cross, of the New York Herald-Tribune; Dean Carl W. Ackerman, of the Graduate School of Journalism, Columbia University; William Allen White, of the Emporia Gazette; David Lawrence, of the United States News, and J. Charles Poe, of the Chattanooga News.

Tonight at 7 o'clock the editors and their wives will be guests at a buffet supper at the home of Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, and Mrs. Meyer.

In Spotlight as American Society of Newspaper Editors Opened Convention

Editors Handed Gloomy Picture Of World Crisis

Nazi Troops Cause Blood to Turn Cold, Asserts Edson K. Bixby.

Back from a tour of Europe, Edson K. Bixby, of the Springfield (Mo.) News-Leader, yesterday painted to the American Society of Newspaper Editors a melancholy picture of conditions in Germany, Austria, Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

Bixby arrived in Vienna just after its absorption by Hitler. Twenty-five thousand Nazi troops patrolled the city, he said, and armored cars and tanks were everywhere. The Nazi soldiers, he said, caused the blood to turn cold.

"The Funeral of Vienna."

"They don't shuffle," he said. "When they move they make a clanking sound—clank, clank, clank. The patricians of Vienna told me I was attending the funeral of Vienna. But there were others, who welcomed Hitler, believing that he would free them from the Jews and the Roman Catholic Church. The Jewish doctors were driven from the hospitals at first, but were quickly called back. There were no Aryan doctors to do their work."

Bixby said Berlin was "a great war camp," with 1,000,000 men under arms. Here, he said, he encountered an atmosphere of fear and dread, created largely by the presence of 25,000 secret police.

He said Hitler was revered as a god by many Germans.

"The tragedy of it is," he added, "that Hitler now believes this himself. He started out to save Germany, but he is now convinced that his mission is to save the world."

Beat Il Duce to Gun.

Bixby scoffed at reports Mussolini had an understanding with Hitler concerning the Austrian coup. Hitler, he said, simply beat Mussolini to the gun, and he quoted Italians as saying:

"You will never find Italians and Germans fighting in the same trench."

The Missourian said Hungary and Czechoslovakia were "trembling" as they waited Hitler's next move, and he predicted that if Hitler invaded the latter country France would not lift a hand to help her.

Bixby said he came home reciting to himself the lines:

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead . . . ."

Alaska-Canadian Road Discussed

By the Associated Press.

Administration and British Columbia officials shaped plans at a conference yesterday for an early start on a $20,000,000 highway from the American Northwest to Alaska.

Conferees, who included Secretary Ickes and Prime Minister T. B. Pattullo, of British Columbia, indicated Congress might be asked at this session to approve a $15,000,000 loan to finance the western Canadian Province's share of the 2,200-mile road.

Britain Spends $250,000,000 On Air Forces

Proposals to Buy Planes in U. S. Are Criticized by Conservative.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 21.—Britain is spending more than 50,000,000 pounds ($250,000,000) in construction of new airdromes, depots and training fields for the expanded rpyal air force, the auditor general's report for the year ended March 31 disclosed today.

The report showed that each airplane produced in Britain's busy "shadow" factories earned the builders a government-guaranteed profit of 300 pounds ($1,500.)

Six factories, five of which are operated by automobile manufacturers, cost the government 1,418,351 pounds ($7,092,000) in 1936.

The companies undertook to build, equip and operate factories for the air ministry for immediate production of airplanes and engines and as a potential source of emergency supply as part of the rearmament program.

New airdrome expenditures, the report said, are for bases both in the British Isles and in British overseas possessions.

Meanwhile, proposals to buy military airplanes in the United States were criticized by Oliver Simmonds, Conservative member of Parliament and chairman of the air raid precautions committee.

Simmonds, former chairman of the Simmonds Aircraft Co., said in an address at Birmingham that such purchases would be regarded in England as a "grave public scandal" and assailed the "air of mystery in which the government has wrapped its air mission to the United States."

The mission left for the United States yesterday. Its chief concern was with the possibility of buying long range bombing planes.

Loan Seekers Jam Hotel in New York

New York, April 21 (AP).—Hundreds of applicants for Federal loans to small businesses slowed up all other business in the hotel New Yorker today. The applications totaled $5,000,000.

The Small Businessmen's Association, offering application blanks and advice to loan seekers, gave up its headquarters in the hotel because of the jam.

Raise Journalism's Standards, Dean Proposes to Editors Here

Newspaper Organizations Should Emulate Legal and Medical Professions, and Take Hold of Schools, Olson Tells Society.

The major newspaper organizations of the country should take hold of journalism schools the way the medical and legal professions did their schools years ago, Kenneth E. Olson, dean of the Medill School of Journalism, Northwestern University, told the American Society of Newspaper Editors yesterday.

He suggested the appointment of a committee to set high standards for journalism schools and to extend recognition to those schools who observed such standards.

His talk, in part, follows:

"If any of you still have the outmoded idea, which President Hutchins (University of Chicago), evidently harbors, that a school of journalism spends four years teaching nothing but reporting, copyreading and other technical courses, I hope you will disabuse your minds, for the better schools at least have been moving steadily in the direction of reducing the technical course content and requiring that from three-fourths to four-fifths of the four-year program be devoted to the acquisition of a broad liberal education.

"The stress is being placed more and more on background. These schools are trying to give their students a wide acquaintance with history, political science, economics, sociology, literature and an integration of this knowledge with newspaper practice.

"Their technical courses aim only at giving these students a running start so that they will be more immediately useful to their newspaper employers. The graduate of a good school of journalism is no more a finished newspaperman than the graduate of a medical school is a full-fledged physician."

Dean Olson said he still was old-fashioned enough to believe that "newspapermen are born, not made," and he told how in his own school efforts were made to weed out the unfit.

A practical newspaperman who turned to teaching seven months ago, Dean Olson said that of 532 universities and colleges that teach journalism, only 32 were so-called Class A schools. The "flooding" of the market, he said, is done not by these Class A schools but by the others. He added:

"It doesn't do much good to talk about raising the standards of our trade or craft, or whatever you want to call it, to the status of a profession with professional schools, as long as editors and publishers all over the country are willing to hire high school graduates at $10 or $12 a week."

Speakers Advocate Aid for Character

Increasing the character building program for youth of today is the surest way of reducing relief loads of the future, according to speakers at a meeting of the Community Chest League yesterday at 4200 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Mrs. Wilson Compton, past president of the Y. W. C. A., called attention to the influx of girls and young women into Washington, seeking government jobs, as a leading reason for the program of the Girl Scouts and Y. W. C. A's.

Arthur Hellen, general counsel for the Community Chest, said that "supporting agencies that give healthy opportunities to all young people on an equal basis might be compared to supporting the symphony orchestra. Neither could survive without a public subsidy and both make this city a pleasanter place in which to live."

Jones Is Unable To See Reason For Recession

RFC Head, at Lynchburg, Says 'No Real Dangers' Confront Nation.

By the Associated Press.

Lynchburg, Va., April 21.—Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said tonight that "personally, I have been unable to see any justification for this recession in business."

"No real dangers confront us," he said in an address before the annual dinner of the Lynchburg Chamber of Commerce. "Our banks and financial institutions are sound and strong. The 1937 crops were good and commodity prices fair.

"Undoubtedly we overbought during 1936 and the first part of 1937. This was due, in part, to high-powered installment selling.

"We must learn constraint. The Government cannot go on forever paying out more than it takes in."

Jones devoted a large part of his talk to personal tribute to his close friend, Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia.

Defends Loan Bill.

Turning to a discussion of the bill recently introduced by Senator Glass and passed by Congress authorizing the RFC to make loans to States, counties, municipalities and other political subdivisions for useful self-liquidating projects, Jones said:

"The Glass bill made no change in the security requirements of our law, nor did it increase our borrowing capacity," he said. "We borrow the money we lend and pay interest upon it, and the amount we can borrow is limited. * * * *

Wants to Co-operate.

"We do not want to compete with the banks," he said. "But to co-operate with them. Where they have a customer who needs to borrow for a longer time and upon the security of improvements and fixed assets—security that commercial banks ordinarily do not like to depend upon—we will make the credit available.

"We would like especially to lend for carrying inventories that will enable manufacturers to anticipate trade requirements and not be forced to sacrifice their products. We want to bring to the manufacturer the same assistance in this respect that we give to the producers of farm commodities through commodity loans. Loans on inventories, like loans on commodities, will require that the inventories be warehoused or segregated in such manner as to permit an enforceable lien."

Program Drawn Up.

A program involving Government guarantee of bank loans to small industries in order to eliminate distressed inventory conditions which arose from last year's sharp business recession and resulted in a sharp drop in orders and employment has been drawn up by John W. Hanes, member of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The plan provides:

A Government guarantee of 90 per cent of the loans made by banks to small industries, such loans not to exceed 80 per cent of the cost of finished products.

The loans will be limited to 25 per cent of last year's sales production.

Hanes estimated that this inventory loan would be equal to 64 per cent of the sales value of goods of an industrial concern. The Government would guarantee the loan for a period of three to five years.

One of the features of the depression is the unwillingness of industry to accumulate inventories, because of the uncertainty of the business situation. Industry sustained sharp losses last year when it was caught with inventories which it had accumulated at a time of rising prices.

Interior Workers 'Escape' Having to Hear Ickes Speak

"You can thank the Lord you haven't got to hear a speech from me," Secretary Ickes, one of the chief orators of the New Deal, told members of the Interior Department Recreational Association last night when they gathered at their first annual banquet with the Secretary listed on the program as the orator of the occasion.

Instead of speaking at length, the Secretary simply wished the association well, saying that he would like to see every employe of the department a member. Several hundred persons attended the banquet, and were entertained by the Bacone Glee Club, composed of 21 Indians—representing nine tribes — from Bacone College, Okla.

Edward J. Kelly, chairman of the athletic committee of the association, awarded trophies to the winning teams in the Athletic League. Stanley W. Crosthwait, the association president, presided. On the banquet committee were S. P. Eagleton, Pierce M. Rice, Ian Forbes and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Reid.

$50,000,000 in Gold to be Freed Weekly to Banks by Treasury

Spend

Committee hearings on the $1,250,000,000 work relief phase of the President's program. Hopkins completed his defense of the seven-month unemployment relief plan, and Deputy Administrator Aubrey Williams opened the case for the National Youth Administration.

Idle Funds Put to Work.

As the Treasury decided to start pumping freed gold gradually into the credit structure, following the Federal Reserve Board's recent $750,000,000 cut in reserve requirements, there were already indications that the banks are putting increased idle funds to work.

In New York, 36 savings banks in Brooklyn, Queens, Staten Island and Long Island said they jointly had $100,000,000 to lend on improved real estate. These banks in a statement said they were ready to lend money to individuals planning to build homes, to conservative builders in approved neighborhoods and to refinance existing mortgages.

"The Government may start the ball rolling but the savings banks and other institutions in position to make mortgage loans will have to carry the movement forward," said the statement.

In New York, Treasury issues reached new 1938 peaks and corporate bonds generally turned upward, as banks put millions of dollars into the security markets, other dispatches said.

As explained at the Treasury, gradual feeding out of desterilized gold will be accomplished by Treasury redemption for cash of one of two $50,000,000 weekly issues of short-term bills. The remaining $50,000,000 would be replaced by a similar amount of the same type of security. It was contended such a plan would reduce the national debt $50,000,000 weekly so long as it is in effect.

In one quarter it was indicated this procedure will be followed for at least eight weeks, but officials would not say whether the plan would be continued until the entire $1,400,000,000 in desterilized and free gold has been paid out. By redeeming $1,352,134,000 in short-term Treasury bills maturing between now and June 30, the Treasury could disburse virtually all of its gold hoard. The money thus disbursed will go into the excess reserves of the banks, there becoming available for loans to private borrowers.

Inflation Predicted.

At the Capitol, Representative Taber in his floor attack on the entire new recovery program, declared the plan "unquestionably will result in inflation."

"With the release of gold from the general fund of the Treasury, there has already been an addition of gold certificates outstanding in the sum of $1,400,000,000," said Taber.

"Reports of the Treasury's purchase of paper for the printing of currency raises the prospect that the Administration is preparing to issue the entire $3,000,000,000 of greenbacks authorized by the vicious Thomas inflation amendment.

"This will wipe out the entire cushion of $4,400,000,000 of Federal Reserve notes in circulation and unquestionably will result in inflation. That means a destruction of the Government's credit, a reduction in the price of Government bonds, a lowering of the purchasing power of the wage of the working man, and the complete stagnation of industry."

As an alternative for the President's recovery program, Taber proposed:

Wiping out all appropriations for the National Labor Relations Board as a prelude to legislation for "a fair labor board."

Enactment of Senate tax bill, repeal of the undivided profits tax and low flat rates on corporation income and capital gains.

Repeal of the Thomas "inflation" amendment.

Export of surplus farm products "along constructive lines."

Return of the relief problem to local governments, with required local contribution of 25 per cent.

Limiting appropriations to "what is needed, without fangles."

House criticism of "pump-priming" plans was almost entirely limited to Republicans, but Representative John Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, lashed out at Administration proposals to loan RFC funds to utilities as well as other business enterprises.

Rankin said "one of the most outrageous proposals yet advanced is that made by the RFC to loan public money to private power interests under the pretense of increasing employment and helping to restore prosperity." He said he could not understand "why the RFC would want to finance the enemies of the Administration to carry on their fight against the Administration and its power policies."

Closed Hearing Held.

Meanwhile, behind closed doors of the House Appropriations Committee room Administration officials were explaining how relief and other spending phases of the program will be put into immediate operations. Hopkins concluded his statement, and was subjected to critical cross-questioning by Representative Taber. Chairman Clifton A. Woodrum of the deficiencies sub-committee explained that testimony from agencies affected will continue today, and all next week, before the committee gets down to the task of bill-drafting.

Woodrum confirmed that the committee has been asked by buildings bloc members to increase the $25,000,000 Federal building fund recommended by the President to $50,000,000 to permit postoffice building and other construction in each congressional district. But he made clear that it was not a party "patronage" request, as the projects are awarded under present law without regard to whether a district is Republican or Democratic.

At his press conference yesterday, Secretary Ickes hinted that public bodies which have projects already approved should begin to accumulate funds to match PWA loans under the new program. "If I were doing it," he said, "I would start looking around right now to see how soon I could get started."

Ford, Roosevelt to Talk.

South Sudbury, Mass., April 21 (U.P.).—Henry Ford, adamant foe of the New Deal, will "renew an old acquaintanceship" next Wednesday with its sponsor, President Roosevelt.

"I'm going down to let him have a look at someone who doesn't want anything and who also doesn't want to give him any advice," the motor magnate told newsmen in an interview today outside the grist mill on his Wayside Inn estate.

A "back-to-the-farm" movement is the only solution for the Nation's ills, Ford believed. If agriculture improves, he declared, industry automatically will return to normalcy.

"Everyone should have a garden or a farm," he said. "It gets them in the habit of working. Work never hurt anyone. It never hurt me, it won't hurt anyone now."

Ford will leave Wayside Inn tomorrow for his Dearborn, Mich., model farm, where he will remain until his Washington trip. He came here Wednesday with Mrs. Ford.

Bill Is Accepted To Insure Cabs; May Raise Rate

Conferees Agree on Liability of $5,000 for Drivers; Taxis to Decrease.

A taxicab insurance liability bill that is expected to reduce the number of Washington cabs on the streets and possibly to raise the zone rates, while protecting the public from irresponsible operators, was agreed to by Senate and House conferees yesterday.

Providing for liability of the cab owners up to $5,000 for bodily injuries or death and $1,000 property loss, with a $10,000 limit on all judgments based on the same accident, the bill does not permit the larger cab organizations to file bonds or cash deposits in lieu of insurance policies with the Public Utilities Commission.

House conferees accepted the Senate amendments which struck out provisions which would have allowed the Independent Taxi Owners Association operators of the Diamond cabs, to file a blanket bond or policy with the commission for all of its cabs.

Discuss Juvenile Court.

Senate and House conferees also met on the long-delayed juvenile court bill but reached no final agreement because of the difference over whether or not the corporation counsel should be represented in the reorganized court.

Most of the amendments were disposed of, according to Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, but details were withheld pending a final agreement.

The major issue, however, is between social welfare groups, who favor the House bill, and lawyers, who prefer the Senate measure.

Counsel Retained.

Under the original House bill the corporation counsel would be replaced by a social worker acting in the role of a commissioner and named by the court. The Senate measure retains the authority of the corporation counsel to pass upon complaints and initiate proceedings.

As soon as the Senate and House agree to the conference report on the taxicab insurance bill, the measure, which has been before Congress for the past eight years, will go to the White House for the President's signature.

Testimony given before Congressional committees on the bill indicate clearly that the requirement that all local cabs file liability insurance policies with the Public Utilities Commission will reduce the number of cabs on Washington streets.

Cab operators and Riley E. Elgin, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, also have predicted that it will bring about an increase in rates of five cents a zone to cover the insurance premimums.

There are now close to 5,000 cabs licensed in Washington, and the commission has long maintained that there are too many, both because of traffic congestion and for their own economic good.

'Cops and Robbers' Brings Four Boys Witnesses' Fees

Four boys earned $3 apiece as witnesses before the District grand jury yesterday because a game of "cops and robbers" they were playing Tuesday night developed an unexpected element of realism.

During their play the boys—James and Glen Robertson, 9 and 6 years old, and Raymond and Richard Collins, aged 9 and 7, all of the 300 block of Ninth street southeast—observed a colored woman throwing papers but of a pocketbook. They picked up one of the papers, a telegram, and took it home to James O. Robertson, father of two of the boys, who turned it over to Fifth Precinct Policemen E. J. Fitzgerald and J. F. Seely.

Subsequently the boys identified Margaret Long, 51, as the woman they had followed and whom police charged with larceny of the pocketbook of Betty Hamner, 603 North Carolina avenue southeast, to whom the telegram was addressed.

La Follette Warns Of New 'Relapse'

Madison, Wis., April 21 (A.P.).—Gov. Philip F. La Follette, who has split with President Roosevelt on methods to bring the Nation out of the recession, told a radio audience tonight able-bodied men and women must be put to work at productive enterprises to insure the return of better times.

He took issue with what he called the "underlying, fundamental assumption" of the Hoover and Roosevelt Administrations that "to spend or loan public money would enable our people and our resources to mark time until prosperity returned."

"Now that we have suffered another relapse it is almost certain that we will receive a dose of the same medicine we have been taking," he said. "It will again produce a pick-up in business, but a pick-up produced by this kind of medicine is quite likely to be followed by another and more serious relapse.

Folk Fete Will Give Pupils Special Price

In recognition of the educational value of the National Folk Festival, children of the Washington public schools will be permitted to attend the Friday afternoon program and have been granted a special admission price of 25 cents for all three matinee performances.

The Congress of Parents and Teachers in the District will be in charge of ticket sales. Through the co-operation of Mrs. Walter B. Fray, president, P.-T. A., representatives will visit the schools to determine how many children desire to attend.

School tickets will be on sale at P. T. A. headquarters at 1201 Sixteenth street northwest, with Mrs. William Moyer, chairman of ways and means, in charge.

Teachers who accompany the children will also be granted the 25-cent special rate.

The festival will be held at Constitution Hall on May 6, 7 and 8 under sponsorship of The Washington Post. Arrangements for the ticket sales to school children were made through co-operation with the Board of Education and Dr. Frank N. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

The Bagpipes Are Coming to Folk Festival

James Garrioch, of Rockville, Will Lead Pibrochs for Sword Dance.

The Scotch will be well represented at the fifth annual National Folk Festival—both through old ballads and customs woven into the basic culture of this country and by newer Scotch groups who will play bagpipes and sing in Gaelic.

The bagpipers will be led by Pipe Major James Garrioch, of Rockville, Md., official major for the local St. Andrew's Society, the Clan MacClennan and the Daughters of Scotia.

Among his pipers will be Dr. William Crawford, of Hyattsville, who has taught the art of making and playing the bagpipe to numerous Americans. The early Scotch groups who came to America did not bring their bagpipes—and nothing pleases Dr. Crawford more than to search out their great great-grandchildren and instruct them in this form of music.

The Scotch dance will be presented under the direction of Mary O'Meyer, who will herself dance "Shean Treuse"—which represents a small boy's delight at his first pair of trousers. Other dance numbers will include the sword dance, which in olden days was performed by troops going into battle, both as a means of relieving the battle tension and as an exhibition of self-control.

"Tear a Bhanta" will be sung by Anna Belle MacLeod, who learned it from her grandmother in the traditional Gaelic from the highlands of Scotland.

Among the several local persons who have worked to arrange the Scotch program are Norman Campbell and W. C. Buell, of the St. Andrew's Society; Andrew Meldrum, of the Clan MacClellan, and Mrs. Homer Pitteringer, of Takoma Park, Md.

Five Seized Here Over 'FlimFlam'

Five colored persons were arrested yesterday as police opened a drive against exponents of the "filmflam game," estimated to have cost District residents more than $8,000 last year.

Picked up by Lieut. Joseph Shimon near the city postoffice and booked for investigation were Billie Mae Fields, 36, 1427 W street northwest; Mike Smith, 42, Columbus, Ohio, and Willie Miller, 48, Birmingham, Ala.

The flimflam operators plant a wallet on the sidewalk, ask the dupe if he dropped it, and talk him into holding the empty billfold and putting up some of his own money for the privilege.

daily," Smith said, "and it takes a long time to build a bridge. So I thought I would just get the ball rolling."

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission has been studying similar proposals.

The commission set up in the Smith bill would comprise the President, the Vice President, the Speaker of the House and the chairman of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee.

The Secretary of the Interior and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, however, would be in charge of the investigation, which would be made by an advisory board, consisting of the following:

An architect of the District, an engineer from Virginia, a railroad engineer and an attorney licensed to practice both in Virginia and the District.

This advisory board is empowered to prepare a preliminary design for the combination bridge and tunnel and to submit estimates.

An authorization of $25,000 to conduct the inquiry, the money to come from the United States Treasury, is provided. Smith said it is too early to forecast whether the project would be financed entirely by Federal funds.

The bill was referred to the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee.

that he knew Matthew H. McCloskey, Philadelphia contractor, who holds more than $9,000,000 worth of contracts let by the Pennsylvania general authority, had negotiated with PWA.

He made this assertion at a press conference after the Democratic battle in Pennsylvania had produced charges that Gov. George H. Earle had borrowed personal funds from McCloskey.

Earle, who is running for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator against a ticket backed by Senator Guffey and the C. I. O., announced yesterday that he would discuss the loan charges fully at a press conference today.

At Philadelphia the party split was accentuated today with a charge by City Democratic Chairman John B. Kelly that Senator Guffey was attempting to wreck the party in hopes of obtaining the nomination for Vice President in 1940.

Kelly declared at a rally:

"Guffey is an arch conspirator. He's tying up with the opposition in the hope of wrecking the State organization so he can control the Pennsylvania delegation to the Democratic National Convention in 1940 and team up with Southern Democrats to get the nomination for Vice President."

Philadelphia, April 21 (A.P.).—Richard Lloyd Jones, Tulsa, Okla., editor and preconvention campaign manager for Gov. Landon in 1936, appealed to Pennsylvania Republicans tonight to nominate Gifford Pinchot for Governor to show "the Republican Party is not for sale."

oil and administered the sacrament of extreme unction conditionally.

"Per istam sanctam unctionem," the priest murmured, "Through this holy anointing."

Holden was pronounced dead by Dr. R. F. Shaw, 1324 Michigan avenue northeast. He was believed to have been dead for only 10 or 15 minutes when found, shortly before 8 p. m.

In his pocket was a note addressed to his wife, Mrs. Virginia Holden. It said:

"You will find my Navy discharge papers in the lower bureau drawer. Please bury me in Arlington Cemetery. Please keep this away from the children as much as you possibly can. I never thought I would come to this . . . it seems the best way out."

Prostrate last night at her home at 229 Fourteenth street northeast, Mrs. Holden could assign no motive for the suicide. Her husband had been in good health, she said, and had appeared cheerful.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

GILT OFF THE DOME: Some members of Congress have been sending their secs to the Library of Congress for the issue of Life Magazine with the candid baby pictures . . . A few of the more advanced lawmakers think 3% is enough for any investor or lender . . . Unlike their male colleagues, the female members of Congress rarely take male constituents to lunch in the Capitol dining rooms. But the men frequently take ladies.

• • • •

OVERSEAS BULLETIN: If the Duke of Windsor behaves himself, keeps a stiff upper lip and promises to give a boost to the laggardly recruiting of the British army, he may get his passport o. k.'d for England.

But no more red checkered shorts, mind you.

• • • • . . . esthetic.

As a country boy prowling through the chambers of state, I have learned one axiom on cost of government: What you save during the oratory you lose when an appropriation bill comes to a vote.

"—ticklish time to reform him."

A crusty old Senator who is "loyal to the President, but—" was discussing Mr. Roosevelt's penchant for mixing recovery and reform into one batter.

"It's a smart wife," he said, "who doesn't try to reform her husband at the moment when he's lying in the hospital all bandaged after an auto crash caused by one-armed driving."

• • • •

The Capital is a terrible town for gossip . . . The 5-year-old b. b. came home from school with the news (straight from the small son of an Important Official) that one of the German diplomats wears a corset just like mommy.

• • • •

It's a period of shifting loyalties in Washington. One is reminded of an extravaganza on Broadway a few years ago, in which the sovereign whirled on his trusty chancellor every few minutes and demanded:

"Are you loyal, Bendoff?"

And the vizier invariably replied ringingly: "Loyal, your highness!" a little nervously.

• • • •

I'm inclined to agree with the prevalent opinion in the Capital that Mrs. Roosevelt is permitting herself to be imposed upon, but is too darned nice (and too rugged) to complain . . . Any sewing circle, study club or coffee klatch that can hire a bus or wangle an excursion rate to Washington straggles into the White House sooner or later and spends 45 minutes gaping at the First Lady over a cup of tea.

• • • •

The other afternoon she received six different groups, most of them motivated apparently by avid curiosity. Even if it were not a mistake to encourage this vulgar trait, it's hard on the carpets.

Let Westbrook Pegler write a column about this, either pro or con . . . Merely to contemplate the spectacle exhausts me.

"—no mood for reform later."

On the other hand, as I hasten to point out before someone beats me to it, apparently it's easier to reform an errant husband when he's flat on his back, and the same thing applies to an errant country . . . One or two degrees of fever help sensitize the conscience . . . When he gets well again he's apt to see nothing wrong in an occasional blond.

When Uncle Sam gets back to normal he'll be saying "Well, what the heck WAS wrong about 1929?" He'll be in no mood then for reform; and the reformers know it.

• • • •

When Irene de Bruyn Robbins, widow of the President's cousin, was appointed assistant chief of foreign service buildings, in charge of interior decoration, her envious friends thought she would be jaunting from embassy to legation to consulate, selecting the right drapes and upholsteries and deciding that the Gaugin didn't look right over the early Hohenzollern mantle . . .

• • • •

But she has remained in Washington, running things by mail, and for all she knows American attaches abroad have the living room walls covered with autographed photos of Myrna Loy and group pictures of their college football teams. The Capital is content; she would be greatly missed; and her esthetic slant has plenty of scope here.

• • • •

CAPITAL CAVIAR: A mastermind suggests to every Congressman he can buttonhole that all machines that displace manpower should be taxed $1 a day, and the money used to create jobs . . . The same fee for a malted milk mixer and a concrete mixer? . . . Toast by a cynical Republican, who is more hepeful now about 1940: "Here's to fear!" . . . When urbane, distinguished George Whitney testified here at the SEC hearing about his brother Richard's troubles, clothes-conscious Washingtonians in the audience noticed his expensive pants were cut a trifle short, without cuffs, and revealed the wrinkles of his garterless socks.

Rep. Shafer Seeks Broad G. H. A. Quiz

'Something Wrong,' He Says as Brown Resignation Is Disclosed.

Medical Director Refuses to Give Reason for Leaving Group.

The mysterious resignation of Dr. Henry Rolf Brown as medical director of the Group Health Association was disclosed yesterday by Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, who seized upon the opportunity to demand a sweeping investigation of the G. H. A.

When the House convenes Monday Shafer, defender of the District Medical Society and bitter critic of the HOLC-sponsored group clinic, will introduce a resolution requesting an inquiry immediately, he asserted.

"The resignation of Dr. Brown indicates clearly that something is wrong," the House member said in a statement. "Dr. Brown is a physician of long experience, well versed in the practical problems of medical practice. He took up his work with Group Health Association, I believe, because he sincerely thought he could do a real public service."

"Something Wrong," He Says.

"The fact that he has resigned voluntarily can be answered in only one way—that something is seriously wrong in Group Health Association."

Dr. Brown, who resigned as tuberculosis director of the Veterans' Administration to head the medical stac of the G. H. A. when it opened for business last November at 1328 I street northwest, confirmed the report of his resignation. He declined, however to state the reason.

"I have other things in mind," was as far he would go.

Officials of the Home Owners Loan Corporation volubly praised his work and expressed regret at his leaving. His departure, however, will not interfere with the clinic's services to 2,500 Federal employes and their 3,500 dependents, they said.

Acting medical director is Dr. Raymond E. Selders, staff surgeon and obstetrician.

Taken Ill in February.

Dr. Brown said he was taken ill last February and had not been on the job since February 17, but would not blame his resignation upon poor health.

He said he submitted his resignation in writing to W. C. Kirkpatrick, president, and the board of trustees of the G. H. A. April 15, to take effect April 30. Dr. Brown said he did not discuss his action with Representative Shafer, nor had he spoken with him since.

Spokesmen for the HOLC, whose outright grant of $40,000 to launch the health enterprise elicited sharp criticism in Congress, said the GHA was financially sound, with clients paying their dues of $2.20 or $3.30 a month and receiving the services to which they were entitled.

"Government employes have invested many thousands of dollars in dues in this scheme," Shafer said. "These people are entitled to have that investment protected. They are entitld to this just as much as they would be to protection of their investments in a life insurance company or a bank or any other similar program.

Notes Russell Resignation.

"The Corporation Counsel of the District of Columbia has ruled that this organization is operating in violation of the insurance laws. The heads of the organization claim it is not. But while the courts and the lawyers are debating it, the organization is collecting dues every month from 2,500 members."

Shafer held it "highly significant" that the GHA's legal counsel was Horace Russell, who this week resigned as general counsel of the HOLC after his use of franking privileges to extol a former associate had been disclosed.

"This situation has gone on much too long as it is," Shafer declared. "The resignation of Dr. Brown proves conclusively that something is very wrong indeed in Group Health Association and that immediate investigation is the unavoidable duty of Congress."

D. C. Laborer Crushed By Barrow of Cement

Thomas DeLorentis, 41, a laborer, of 1010 Virginia avenue southwest, was injured critically late yesterday when crushed beneath a wheelbarrow full of cement in Silver Spring, Md. Youths Accord Honor as Tops To Mae West

Roosevelt Rated Greatest Living Person, With 'My Mother' Second.

Teen-age boys who like to read "Tom Sawyer" and "Robin Hood" also go for Mae West in a big way.

In fact, the buxom blonde of the screen is their favorite movie actress, it was revealed yesterday when the results of a survey made by Optimist International, a service club organization, were made public.

The survey, made among 5,000 members of Junior Optimist Clubs in the United States and Canada, showed that Alice Faye ranged next to Mae West as favorite actress. Next, in order, came Sonja Henie, Ginger Rogers, Myrna Loy and Shirley Temple. The boys' favorite actor was Clark Gable, with Buck Jones second and Paul Muni third.

They considered President Roosevelt was "the greatest person now living," the Chief Executive getting four times as many votes as the second choice, "my mother." "My father" came third and was followed by Lindbergh, Mussolini, Henry Ford, Helen Keller and Einstein. The Vice President, John N. Garner, received one vote.

Despite their general admiration for the President, only 6 per cent of the lads said they'd like to trade places with him. Asked whose shoes they'd like to be in, most of them seemed content to remain themselves but about 36 per cent named movie actors or famous athletes.

The boys' favorite books were "Tom Sawyer," "Treasure Island" and "Robin Hood;" favorite movies, "Hurricane," "The Plainsman" and "Good Earth." George Washington was named the greatest person of all time, with Abraham Lincoln second.

WPA Dismisses 40 Found Eligible for Jobless Insurance

More than 40 persons were released from WPA jobs within the last two months upon the discovery they were eligible for unemployment insurance, it was disclosed yesterday.

It was pointed out, however, that those released were unaware of their eligibility for the benefit payments.

Notwithstanding, officials have ordered a thorough investigation of the WPA rules to find others who should receive the relief checks. More than 9,000 persons are on the roles.

In the meantime officials stated that close scrutiny had been ordered between the WPA and District Unemployment Compensation commission operation to detect violations of applicants.

Several cases were noted recently where persons had received benefit payments by false representations.

Tracks to Remain The Way They Are On Dupont Circle

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday stated it would not compel the Capital Transit Co. to reroute the car tracks around Dupont Circle.

Although the commission ordered a complete rerouting system of the transit company tracks last year, the item relating to Dupont Circle will be held in abeyance. The change would place tracks around the eastern portion of the circle, thus enable street cars to proceed with vehicular traffic.

It was pointed out that although the appropriation for an underpass was deleted from this year's District supply bill, it would be requested in the 1940 bill.

2 New Yorkers Held as Bogus Money Passers

Arrested by Maryland State police after a 60-mile-an-hour chase on the Baltimore Boulevard between Hyattsville and Laurel, two New Yorkers last night were held on suspicion of passing counterfeit money in the District.

Driving a car with Florida license tags, the men had been described in a look-out broadcast by secret service agents over the Washington police radio. No counterfeit money was found on the men or in their car, police said.

Red Cross Gives Certificates to Graduates

Post Staff Photos.

Certificates of proficiency were awarded to more than 500 graduates of instruction courses in volunteer service, first aid, life saving and home hygiene at exercises yesterday in the District Red Cross chapter headquarters.

Volunteer workers in yellow, pink and gray uniforms, metropolitan and park police in dark blue and Girl Scouts in olive drab all marched before the flower-banked stage to receive their "diplomas" at the hands of Red Cross officials.

Describing the Red Cross as "a unique experiment in human relationships," Walter Davidson, assistant manager of the Eastern Area, told the group, "Here you have volunteer enthusiasm combined with professional skill."

"Organized service for humanity is the greatest achievement of the present age," he said. "Every member of the Red Cross is a potential servant of the public."

Other speakers included Brig. Gen. Frank R. Keefer, chairman of the local chapter, and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy and chairman of the Red Cross Navy-Marine production unit.

Certificates were presented by Miss Mabel T. Boardman, chairman of special volunteer services, assisted by Mrs. Phillip Young, chairman of the staff assistance unit; Mrs. Henry G. Wood, in charge of health aides; Mrs. Albert N. Baggs, Gray Ladies; Dr. Roy Lyman Sexton, first aid and life saving; Mrs. George C. Ruhland and Miss Caroline E. Thomson, home hygiene and care of the sick, and Mrs. William G. Finn and Miss Melva B. Bakkie, food and nutrition.

Dr. McClellan Named to Head D.C. Symphony

L. Corrin Strong, Drive Chairman, Is Elected Vice President.

Dr. William McClellan, president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., was elected president of the National Symphony Orchestra Association at the annual meeting of the organization yesterday in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

L. Corrin Strong, chairman of the orchestra's recent campaign for a 1938-39 sustaining fund, was elected vice president, and Walter Bruce Howe was re-elected secretary.

Ten members were elected to the board of directors, eight of whom have served previously on the board. Harold A. Brooks, Alice J. Clapp, Mrs. Tracy Dows, John Rowland Hill, Walter Bruce Howe and Milton W. King were those re-elected for three-year terms. Charles W. Eliot and Mary B. Adams were elected for two-year terms, and George Hewitt Myers and Frank R. Jelleff for one-year terms. The latter two are new members.

Describing the past season as "the best in the history of the orchestra," Corcoran Thom, retiring president, told the meeting the success of the orchestra's next season was assured and that plans were under way for summer series of concerts.

Finder to Exhibit Cetothere Despite Smithsonian Offer

The Smithsonian Institution will have to wait for the bones of a cetothere, a 3,000,000-year-old whale, until visitors to Hustle, Va., get tired of paying admission to see them.

The man who discovered the bones, Barbee Spindle, jr., Hustle postmaster, has put them on exhibition despite an offer of purchase by the Smithsonian. Officials said yesterday that the offer, the amount of which they refused to divulge, would hold "when exhibition of the bones becomes unprofitable to their owner."

Two Men Held By Inquest for Traffic Deaths

Coroner's Jury Acts Under Negligent Homicide Law.

A coroner's jury yesterday ordered Joseph P. Murray, 26, of 320 Sixteenth street northeast, and George F. Wald, 22, 1327 Emerson street northwest, held under the negligent homicide act for the deaths of Washington's two most recent traffic victims.

Murray was the operator of a sightseeing bus which Thursday fatally injured William Thomas, 75, a WPA employe, of 212 Eleventh street southeast.

The jury held Wald for the death of J. Leroy Stem, 36, Texas school teacher, who was crushed beneath a concrete mixing truck.

Architects Act on Shrine To Jefferson

Institute Directors Urge Park Board Approval of Site.

Would Have Fine Arts Commission Pass on Design.

The American Institute of Architects board of directors last night resolved that no site be selected for the Thomas Jefferson Memorial, "without the approval of the Park and Planning Commission." The institute is meeting in New Orleans.

The resloution, recommended by the board's committee on the National Capital, also stated "that no design be executed without the approval of the National Commission of Fine Arts," the United Press reported today.

The resolution is to be considered on the convention floor today.

Meanwhile, in Washington yesterday, Chairman John J. Boylan of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission again defended its choice of location and design, but it was certain that the House Library Committee Tuesday will approve a bill sharply curbing the commission's powers.

Favorable Report Seen.

"No public building or memorial site or design in this country has been free from critics," said a statement issued by the New York Representative.

Simultaneously, the Library Committee was conducting a one-day hearing on Chairman Kent P. Keller's measure providing for creation of a committee to hold a competition for the memorial design. Keller later indicated his committee will draft a favorable report when it meets in executive session Tuesday.

Four supporters and no opponents of the bill were heard by the committee.

Design Criticized Adversely.

H. P. Caemmerer, secretary of the Fine Arts Commission, said that body is "heartily in favor" of the proposed legislation. In reply to a question by Keller, Caemmerer declared the arts group did not approve the Roman Pantheon design, executed by associates of the late John Russell Pope, which the Boylan commission has chosen for erection at the south bank of the Tidal Basin.

Julian E. Berla, representing the League for Progress in Architecture, termed the Pope plan "the white elephant of the Tidal Basin." He recommended a national competition.

Unusual Recipes Offered in Strawberry Contest As Pie Using Cream Cheese Is Judged the Winner

Old-Fashioned Shortcake of Biscuit Dough Is Favored by Many.

Second Prize Goes to Recipe Using Sour Cream for Cake Dough.

The strawberry festival brought many unusual and delectable recipes to the judges of The Post recipe contest. Strawberry shortcake and strawberry pie were favorite dishes among readers. The shortcake recipes were of great variety. A preference was shown for the old fashioned shortcake made from rich biscuit dough and put together with an abundance of crushed ripe berries and served with poured cream . . . Other recipes used cake for the layers or sliced sponge or angel cakes with a topping of whipped cream. A recipe for a shortcake dough made tender and short with sour cream instead of shortening won the second prize.

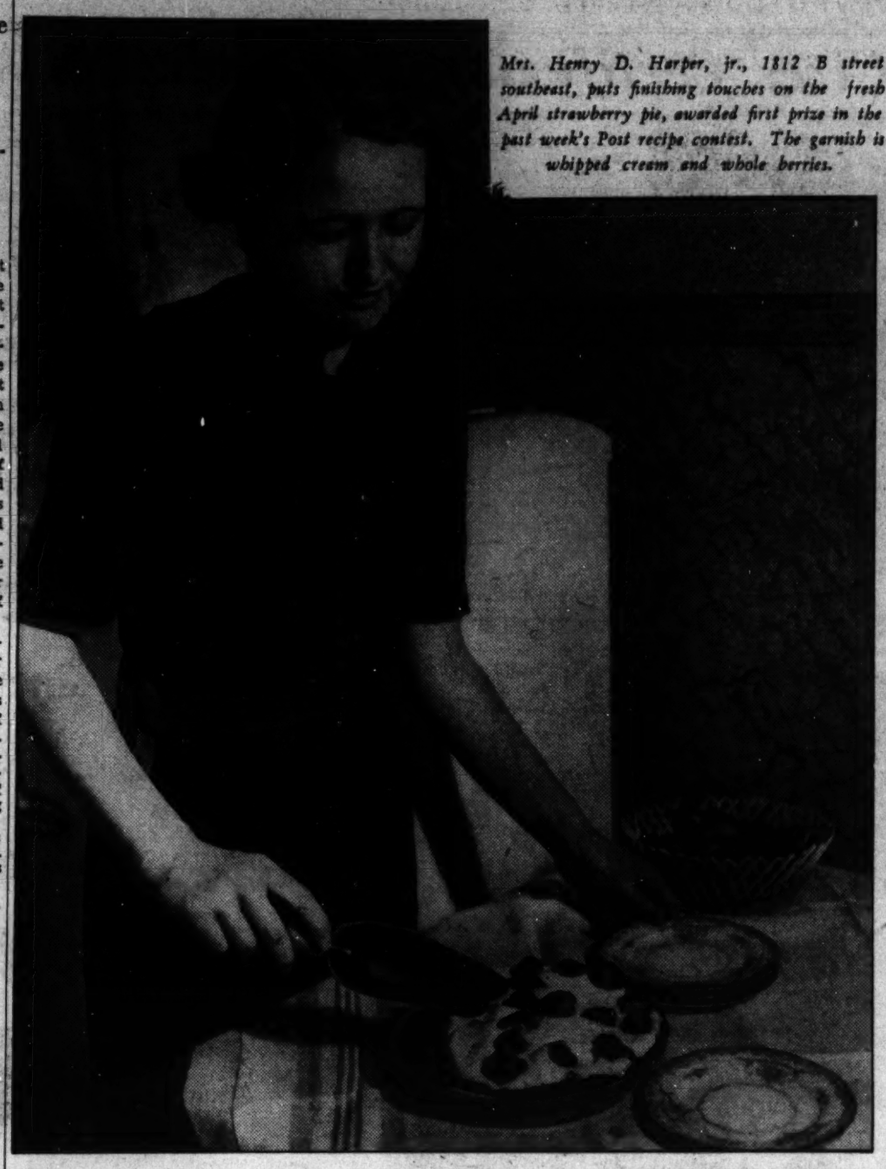
The first prize was given a strawberry pie that can be put together in lightning speed by the kitchenette cook or business girl. The pie shells can either be purchased at one of the bake shops or made in quantities so that the shell is ready for instant use. The smooth flavor of cream cheese adds the touch of individuality to this luscious spring dessert.

The first prize-winning recipe was sent in by Mrs. Henry D. Harper, jr., 1812 B street southeast. Here is her recipe.

FRESH APRIL STAWBERRY PIE.

1 quart fresh strawberries
1 cup sugar
5 tablespoons corn starch
½ cup water
1 package cream cheese
½ cup whipping cream
1 tablespoon powdered sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
1 baked pie shell, 9 inches in diameter

Select about 1 cup of the choicest berries and set them aside for garnish. Mix together the sugar and corn starch; add to cleaned, crushed berries and water. Place mixture in top of heat resistant glass double boiler, 1 quart size and cook until clear and thick—about 15 to 20 minutes. Set aside to cool. Spread cream cheese in the bottom of pie shell already baked in a 9-inch pie plate. Then add half the berries which were set aside for garnish. Pour the cooled strawberry mixture into the pie shell, arrange the remainder of the berries on the top and chill. Just before serving, garnish with whipped cream flavored with sugar and vanilla.



Mrs. Henry D. Harper, jr., 1812 B street southeast, puts finishing touches on the fresh April strawberry pie, awarded first prize in the past week's Post recipe contest. The garnish is whipped cream and whole berries.

An old-fashioned strawberry cake made with rich biscuit dough wins the second prize. The sour cream used in the biscuit dough can be made by adding lemon juice or vinegar to sweet cream. The cake is put together with sweetened whole strawberries and covered with merringue. Strawberry sauce in a bowl is placed at the table. Mrs. Eugene Fincham will find a check in the mail this week for her recipe.

STRAWBERRY SHORT CAKE.

1 quart flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon soda
1½ cups very sour cream
2 eggs
1 pinch salt
2 quarts berries
Sugar to taste

Wash berries reserving 1 dozen or more of the choicest for the top, mash the balance and sweeten to taste.

Sift flour, baking powder, soda and salt; add cream and egg yolks, adding more sour milk, if needed to make a soft dough.

Butter a long biscuit pan and spread this dough smoothly over the surface. Bake in a quick oven.

Whip the whites to a stiff merringue and then add 4 teaspoons sugar and a pinch of salt.

Cut the browned cake in half after buttering generously. Cover it with sweetened berries, put on the top slice, cover that with the merringue and then decorate with whole berries.

Serve at once with a bowl of the strawberry sauce.

Old fashion strawberry preserves that keep their color for nearly two years win the third prize. The recipe has been sent in by Mrs. S. M. Garwood, 4612 Reno road northwest.

STRAWBERRY PRESERVE.

Two cups strawberries, two cups sugar. Let this come to a high boil, stirring carefully. Add one teaspoon vinegar and two more cups of strawberries and two cups sugar. Again let this come to a high boil and boil just ten minutes by the clock. Put in flat dish or platter and stand over night. Then seal cold in glasses or jars. I have kept this preserve for nearly two years and the color retains the bright red. When making large amounts never make more than a quart of beries at a time. I make several pans at a time.

Strawberry salad is an excellent choice for bridge party refreshments. Serve on lettuce and garnish with whipped cream to which a little mayonnaise has been added. The colorful recipe is a favorite dessert of Ann Swanson, 4316 North Nineteenth stret, Arlington, Va.

STRAWBERRY SALAD.

2 cups fresh strawberries, hulled and sliced
½ cup sugar
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
½ teaspoon vinegar
⅛ teaspoon salt
Strawberry juice drained from berries, plus cold water to make ½ cup
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
2 tablespoons whipped cream

Combine strawberries and sugar and let stand one hour. Drain. Dissolve gelatin in boling water and pour over berries. Add vinegar, salt, strawberry juice and water. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in mayonnaise and whipped cream. When ready to serve, unmold on lettuce leaf and garnish with whipped cream to which a little mayonnaise has been added.

A velvety texture, an excellent flavor characterizes this recipe for strawberry ice cream. The recipe was sent in by Mrs. W. R. Vawter, 1307 Seneca lane, Bethesda, Md.

STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM.

2 cups fresh berries (crushed)
¼ teaspoon salt
24 marshmallows
1 cup whipping cream

Place crushed berries and salt in open saucepan. Add marshmallows and soften over a very low flame, fold and over during this process. Remove before marshmallows are entirely melted, but continue folding until the marshmallows have formed a smooth, fluffy mass. Chill in refrigerator 15 minutes. Whip cream stiff and fold into chilled strawberry mixture. Turn control of refrigerator to coldest degree and freeze as quickly as possible. A smoother texture will be acquired if one stirs the mixture occasionally. Some people may prefer a small amount of sugar. This is the best home-made ice cream I've ever eaten.

Recipe Contest

Jellied salads for serving on cold plates is the theme of the new Post recipe contest. The idea was contributed by Mrs. Gertrude Gebel, 2532 Fourteenth street northeast. If you like her idea, then write out your favorite recipe for jellied salads and mail to Jean Green, Post Food Editor, before April 30. Five cash prizes are being awarded. The first is $3, the second $2, and there are three prizes of $1 each.

Suggestions Offered In Food Preservation

Storage of food entails icebox planning. In general, the meats, milk, cream and butter should be stored in the coldest part of the refrigerator, which is usually near the chilling unit. The raw meats should be unwrapped, placed in trays or in shallow dishes and covered with wax paper.

Vegetables such as carrots, celery, green beans and lettuce should be soaked in cold water for an hour to restore crispness, then stored in the vegetable bin in the refrigerator.

Cooked vegetables and meats should be kept in covered jars. There are now available inexpensively covered dishes for this purpose. Also the oil silk, cellophane, or cloth bags are very convenient for covering. With a little careful managing it is possible to store away quite a bit of food.

Remove the pits from cooked prunes, cut in medium-size pieces. Measure 2 cups. Soften 2 teaspoons of granulated gelatin in 2 tablespoons of cold water. Beat 4 eggs until very thick and light. Heat ½ cup of maple sirup, add gelatin and dissolve, pour gradually over beaten eggs, beating constantly. Add the prunes, a little salt, 1 teaspoon of vanilla and 1 dessert spoon of lemon juice. Mix well. Pour into molds and freeze in the refrigerator pan. Unmold and serve with whipped cream.

Salad Suggestions.

Individual service of assorted appetizers is a sophisticated introduction to the menu. The possibilities are unlimited for appetizing flavor combinations. An example worth trying includes a small portion of diced beet and green onion salad in a tiny lettuce cup, ripe olives—a cream cheese stuffed heart of celery, a trio of tiny sardines, a curled anchovy or chilled paprika covered whole shrimp.

Creole Gumbo Recipe Given

If you should ask Senator Allen J. Allender, of Louisiana, about creole cooking, you will probably soon hear about creole rice gumbo. This is a dish that he has made famous on Capitol Hill. It was recently served in his honor at the Senate restaurant.

Creole Rice Gumbo, Allender.

2 pints of okra (sliced)
1 pound of raw ham (diced)
1 large onion
3 pods of garlic
1 sprig of thyme
1 bay leaf
½ sweet pepper
½ pound crabmeat
2 cans green shrimp
3 dozen oysters (canned or fresh)
1 can tomatoes
½ red pepper

Fry sliced okra in bacon or ham grease over medium fire until slightly brown; add diced ham and seasonings which have been minced. Let simmer slowly, then add crabmeat, shrimp, oysters and tomatoes. Season well with salt and red pepper and allow to cook slowly for two hours. Serve very hot with nicely boiled or steamed rice. Serve six.

Preparing Croutons.

Cut half-inch slices of bread into clubes, arrange the cubes in a shallow pan and brown them well, stirring several times with a fork. Then add a tablespoon of butter, and an eighth of a teaspoon each of salt, paprika and celery salt for each cupful of croutons and heat five minutes in a slow oven.

Speaker Says Budget Needed In Homemaking

Mrs. Daniels Asks Systematic System of Instruction for Career.

BUDGETING the family income is just one way in which to become a good homemaker, according to Mrs. Lester S. Daniels, national chairman of the girl homemaker's committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who is in Washington this week.

"We feel that the duties of an efficient homemaker are so complex today that we urge a systematic system of instruction for this carer," she said. "Our 225 girl home-maker clubs scattered over this country have selected particular phases of home making for their projects. Feeding the family of four on a budget of $10 a week was selected by New York State for its project."

The winning project, submitted by Miss Jane C. Hope, Cobleskill High School, N. Y., is now on display at the Continental Hall. It includes menu plan, market list, and a chart showing the proportion of the income spent for each food group. The budget is worked out for an actual family and gives not only age, sex, but the activity of each member of the family.

Costs Itemized.

The cost of the foods used on the menu was worked out from local market prices. The exact quantities purchased were itemized. They were also calculated, according to the amount spent for each food group. The diagram shows the food budget divided into five groups: fats and sugars; meat, fish and eggs; fruits and vegetables; cereals, and milk. The amounts spent for milk, cereals, and meats, fish, and eggs were approximately equal.

A well-balanced diet was stressed. Fruit was included daily on the breakfast menu. Inasmuch as all members of the family came home for the noon meal, the lunch included not only a protein dish but a salad or vegetable, dessert, and beverage. The servings were adequate to satisfy the appetite of two growing children, a father who did office work, and a mother who did light housework. The girl was 8 and the boy, 13.

"We have sponsored this contest in schools in many cases," said Mrs. Daniels. "The project has served to encourage work in home economics. We have given prizes to contestants winning first places in the high schools. In the State contest, the first prize was $5."

Many other States stress Home Economics work under D. A. R. direction. In Texas 44 girl home makers' clubs have been organized. One club of 253 girls, between the ages of 11 and 14, made 596 garments; planned, prepared and served meals; studied china, silver, glassware and linens, and learned how to make homes more comfortable. In Virginia, one chapter secured a home economics teachers for an extra month this year to visit and instruct girls in their homes. A cooking school film was put on for three days to benefit women in the country.

"Each State is working out individually a program that will interest girls in a systematic study of this important career," said Mrs. Daniels. "We believe that there are many important advantages. One of them is gaining more leisure time for the social and cultural side of the home life."

Pressure Cookers Gain Popularity in Kitchens

Pressure cookers are becoming more and more popular. These cookers are not only valuable for canning purposes, but they shorten the cooking time for meal preparation.

Their advantage lies in the fact that the temperature is increased above the boiling temperature. This shortens cooking time and tenderizes tougher cuts of meat such as pot roast and flank steak.

Vegetables cooked in the pressure cookers are cooked without the addition of water. This allows the vegetables to retain the mineral content and full flavor.

READERS' FOOD FORUM

D. A. R. Parties Feature Red, White and Blue Color Schemes.

What is the outstanding party given by your D. A. R. chapter? That was the question selected this week to register the opinion of visiting delegates attending the Forty-seventh Continental Congress.

MRS. SAMUEL JAMES, Carroll Chapter, Illinois: Each chapter in Chicago has one outstanding party each year at one of the downtown hotels. The first is held on Lincoln's birthday by the Gen. Henry Dearborn Chapter. It is a white breakfast, so called because all members wear white. The other party is a luncheon held at the Hotel Stevens on Washington's Birthday. A special luncheon menu is planned by the chef. The dessert is the same from year to year. It is ice cream in emblems to honor the first President and tinted red, white and blue.

MRS. HIRAM E. JOHNSON, Erasmus Perry Chapter, Maryland: The nicest party I can think of was served at the dedication of the flag. Both national and State officers were our guests. We had a cloth specially made for the table in red, white and blue and used these colors for mints, flowers and candles.

MRS. WILSON H. S. WHITE, Pack Horse Ford Chapter, West Virginia: The work accomplished by the Junior Home Makers is a very active part of our program. Each May we co-operate with members of our high school faculty in a style show and tea. The dresses made in class under the direction of the home economics teachers are exhibited in the fashion show. Prizes are awarded and all girls enrolled in the high school are our guests. Mothers also are invited. We use the D. A. R. colors in decorating the tables and choose daughters of members to serve.

MISS BONNIE FARWELL, Fort Harrison Chapter, Indiana, national vice president general, and past State regent: Our luncheon celebrating the winning of the Northwest Territory was very pretty. Illuminated covered wagons made attractive table decorations and a typical colonial menu was served. The luncheon was served by candlelight in a historic church that dates back to very early Indiana history. The speaker at the luncheon talked on the ordinance of 1787 and the trip westward to open the Ohio Valley country to settlement.

MRS. GARLAND FERELL, Eunice Sterling Chapter, Kansas, regent: Our summer parties are picnics. On Flag Day, we have a picnic in the park with the G. A. R. as our guests. It is very informal with only a short program.

An excellent device for holding an inverted angel cake is a funnel turned upside down and inserted into the tube of the pan.

Coconut Cream Tartlets Aid Chef

There are times when the best of families become difficult. When this occurs, choose something very nice to eat. Cream tartlets with nice crunchy coconut appeal directly to youthful appetites and make a party out of the simplest meal. Ever try surprising the family with a batch of tartlets for some Sunday dinner? It's a grand gesture.

Coconut Cream Tartlets.

1 tablespoon powdered sugar
Few drops vanilla
¼ can moist, sweetened coconut
½ cup cream, whipped
½ cup strawberry or raspberry jam
6 baked 2½-inch tart shells

Fold sugar, vanilla and coconut into whipped cream. Place a tablespoon of jam in bottom of each tart shell, and fill with coconut cream mixture. Makes six tarts.

Roasting Fowl.

Roasting hints: chicken and duck require 30 minutes' roasting per pound; turkey or goose require 25 minutes per pound. Fowl should be placed in a roaster and covered with a white cloth and basted every 15 minutes. The cloth should be rinsed in warm water every half hour and then replaced. The lid always should be placed on the roaster.

Rolled Sandwiches Acclaim for Hostess

Any hostess who wants her guests to vividly remember her tea or bridge should try serving rolled sandwiches which thrill the feminine eye. These thin, tasteful sandwiches are so simple to prepare that they are almost essential to a well-planned party.

The secret of making these rolled sandwiches is to use plenty of butter, which holds them together. There are any number of butter spreads which are delicious, and when other fillings are used both sides of the bread should be spread with butter to prevent them from soaking through. Try all sorts of cheese, deviled ham or chicken, watercress, or spices, raisins, or nuts combined with butter in making delicious rolled sandwiches. Decorative and handy for any occasion, the sandwiches make a delightful luncheon when served with tall frosty glasses of chocolate milk shake made with ice cream.

THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

New Breads Add Variety To the Menu

Shops Are Now Offering Many Different Types of 'Life's Staff.'

Use of Rye or Salt-Rising Loaves Will Spur the Appetite.

Imagination rather than money is the key to the menu making. The correct blending of flavors and the addition of accessories to the menu make the difference between an outstanding meal and an uninteresting one.

Washington shops are selling so many different types of breads that intelligent housewives are considering them before making a final decision on the menu. Bread can be a highlight of the meal or just something else on the table.

Good white bread has long been accepted as a necessary item on the menu. It is nutritious and filling and has a flavor that blends well with every type of food. But a change in bread from time to time is possible. A more flavorful bread can be selected. This will increase the appetite. A rye bread baked by a Russian formula, an old-fashioned salt rising bread, or a crusty French bread rubbed with garlic are a few examples. These breads can be designed as a part of a special menu.

The possibility of using bread in cooking should be considered. The bread blends well and is tempting to the budget. When combined with other foods, it makes the more expensive dishes go twice as far. Stuffed hamburger is an excellent end of the month dish.

STUFFED HAMBURGER.

1 pound of hamburger
½ teaspoon of salt
1 egg
Pepper

Mix thoroughly. Press the meat mixture to a depth of 1 inch in four greased custard cups. Then put in a layer of stuffing. Cover with rest of the meat mixture. Set the custard cups in a pan of water and bake in a moderate oven for 45 minutes.

STUFFING.

1 cup of fine bread crumbs
1 tablespoon of minced onion
2 tablespoons of melted butter
½ teaspoon of poultry seasoning
½ teaspoon of salt
1 tablespoon of hot water

Combine ingredients and blend well.

For afternoon tea, the simple dish is cinnamon toast. The spicy aroma and attractive appearance of this toast being made at the tea table marks a step forward in charming informal entertaining. If you have many guests, and can't manage the toast making at a small grill, then make it by this recipe in the oven in large quantities. These dainty cinnamon rolls are attractive and if brought from oven to tea table, they will still retain the smell of freshly baked spice bread.

CINNAMON TOAST ROLLS.

12 thin slices of white bread
2 tablespoons of melted butter
3 tablespoons of powdered sugar
1 teaspoon of cinnamon

Brush the bread with butter. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon mixed. Roll as for a jelly roll. Secure with toothpicks. Place on a baking sheet and bake in a hot oven until brown. Serve with tea.

Crispy brown slices of bread with a melted cheese filling make a delectable sandwich to satisfy every hungry child dashing home from school. These sandwiches must be made to order and served hot. Their flavor is offset by serving halves of broiled apricots or peaches. These fruits add additional nutritive values to the sandwich.

FRENCH TOASTED SANDWICHES.

Cheese
1½ cups of milk
1 well-beaten eggs
¼ teaspoon of salt

Make the cheese sandwiches with white bread. Instead of cheese, deviled ham may be used. Dip the sandwiches into the egg, milk and salt mixture. Fry in butter, letting them brown evenly at a moderate temperature. Serve hot. If desired half a broiled apricot can be used for a garnish.

Steak Flavoring.

Pour a third of a cup of olive oil into a shallow dish. Add a garlic bud and, after three or four minutes, discard it. Dip both sides of a steak into the mixture and then broil it quickly. While the steak is still hot sprinkle it with salt and pepper, dot it with butter and sprinkle it with two teaspoons of lemon juice and one teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce. Serve on a sizzling platter.

Bacon Improves Flavor

THESE seasoned meat cakes have been wrapped in strips of bacon to give a more moist texture. The method of cooking is the same as used for steak. Turn only once during cooking.

Chinese Secret of Fine Foods Is in Blending, Says Traveler

Miss Nancy Finch, Just Returned From Stay in Orient, Discovered Many Cookery Hints; Prefers Shrimp in Fried Rice.

By Jean Green.

Blending is the secret of Chinese cooking, according to Nancy Finch, 3 East Kirke street, Chevy Chase, Md., who has just returned from a 2½-year stay in China.

"I find Chinese food the best in the world," she said. "I think American housewives can pick up many tips from it. Their art of blending flavors has reached a high state of perfection. Time is no element in preparation. Their foods are cooked in combination so that they are not only nutritious but filling and seasoned delicately."

Some of the combinations of food are shrimp and fried rice, chicken and bean sprouts, pork and mixed vegetables, and delicately flavored vegetable omelets.

"The Chinese consider some of our American table manners vulgar," she said. "They would never think of cutting food at the table. Their carving is done in the kitchen and even when the whole roast suckling pig is served at the table little niblets of pork come off when chop sticks are inserted. This carving is done by experts in the kitchen after the roast has been cooked."

Soy Beans Much Used.

"The staff of life in China is rice," she said, "but their most healthful food is the soy bean. Recently the milk from the soy bean has been used in infant feeding. It has been found that refugees have lived on the soy bean milk for months without nutritional diseases becoming evident. The Chinese feed refugees for 40 cents a month. Milk in China costs 70 cents a quart."

Some of the more unusual Chinese dishes that Miss Finch describes are bird's nest soup and pickled eggs. The eggs are buried in specially prepared earth until dark brown in color. They taste like camembert cheese and are considered a great delicacy.

"Salads are never served in China," she points out. "They feel that vegetables are more healthful cooked. However, they use the water in which the vegetables are cooked to prepare a sauce. This means that all vitamins and minerals are preserved."

Chop suey is not Chinese, according to Miss Finch. This dish is an Americanized idea of what blended food should be like but is not comparable to a genuine Chinese dish.

Ingredients Named.

Some of the needed ingredients for Chinese cooking are peanut oil, soya sauce, bean sprouts, and Chinese preserved fruits.

"The meals as served in China would include as many as 15 courses, but in America, two Chinese dishes with a Chinese tea would be sufficient for a guest luncheon or dinner," she said. "Dessert would be preserved Chinese fruits."

All types of stews are used on the menu. Some of them are light and delicate in flavor. Others are one dish meals. Bread is practically unheard of and is never used in frying chicken or fish. The soya sauce is used and the meats are fried in the peanut oil.

The language of the country proved rather confusing. A very disconcerting moment was experienced when she was first asked by a servant, "shlimp fied lice, missy?" This she later discovered is Chinese-American for shrimps in fried rice.

Chinese Menu for Sunday Supper.

Salmon in Ring Of Macaroni Urged in Spring

Shrimp May Be Substituted; Omelets and Souffles Also in Order.

SPRING is here with its gay flowers and frocks, long slim stalks of silver-skinned asparagus and strawberry rhubarb. A chop plate with your favorite egg noodle or macaroni ring filled with creamed salmon or creamed fresh shrimp is a good dish for dressing up the menu in springtime. Serve this with fresh peas, lemon pineapple slices and hot muffins. Bundles of fresh asparagus are attractive.

Omelets and souffles always are in good taste on these menus. Try topping the cheese souffle with crushed fruit before baking. Or spread mixed chopped vegetables over the omelet before folding.

Macaroni and egg noodle dishes are always popular at this season of the year. Undoubtedly much of this popularity is due to the fact that they combine so readily with dairy products, vegetables, meat and sea foods. They are of great value in blending foods. This recipe is a springtime treat.

Egg Noodle Ring With Creamed Fresh Shrimp.

6 ounces egg noodles
1½ cups of hot milk
½ cup of cracker crumbs
1 teaspoon of minced onion
1 tablespoon of chopped green pepper
4 tablespoons of butter
1 pimiento
1 cup of grated American cheese
¾ teaspoon of salt
3 eggs

Cook the egg noodles, without breaking, in boiling salted water until tender. Drain. Scald milk and pour over the cracker crumbs in a mixing bowl. Chop the onion, green pepper and pimiento. Grate the cheese. Fry the onion and green pepper in butter for three minutes. Stir into milk and cracker mixture. Add cheese and seasonings.

Beat the eggs and stir in. Lay the noodles in a greased ring mold. Pour in the cracker and milk mixture, mixing thoroughly by using a knife. Set in a pan of hot water and bake for 50 minutes at 350 degrees. Serve with a filling of creamed fresh shrimp.

Lemon Pineapple Rings.

Sprinkle pineapple rings with lemon juice and allow to stand 20 minutes. Saute them in butter and grated lemon rind. Serve as a garnish with the noodle ring. Arrange on the serving plate with bundle of whole tender green beans or asparagus tied with pimiento strips.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 21.

I OFTEN WONDER whether women all over the country are as career-minded as the crowd with which I train, both socially and professionally. I suppose not, for the girls whom I meet weekly in my business of scouting the business and social scene here are remarkable examples of women who have managed to combine careers with married life in a truly amazing way. Yet their daytime lives are lived in the hurly-burly of jobs, often quite important, and their words on the subject are often valuable and useful for the girl facing life.

ALICE HUGHES

Of the lot, there isn't a more interesting and eloquent executive along Fifth avenue than Mrs. Sara Pennoyer, who heads the advertising and publicity of one of the famous stores. Only the other night she spoke to the student body of the Edgewood Park School for Girls, and what she said is valuable to every girl who looks forward to a business life, as well as marriage and a home. Mrs. Pennoyer's opening line was intensely practical.

"Find out whether you are thing-minded or idea-minded before you set out on a fashion career," said Sarah. "That will be your most important decision. If, when you see a dress, you want to change a line here and there, you are probably thing-minded, and would find your proper niche in buying, styling or designing. But if the same dress starts you to planning ways of displaying and selling it, you are idea-minded, and will do your best work in some form of fashion or store promotion. Early in your career, you will reach this fork in the road, and on your decision may depend your success and happiness."

I don't think the problems facing a girl entering business life were ever more clearly stated than by Sara Pennoyer. It seems certain that more and more girls will embark on careers as time goes on, and these thoughts are surely worth noting and remembering by the girl ending her school days.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Sculpture, of all things, has come to dear old Murray Hill, and the neighborhood has suddenly gone art-minded. In a vacant lot at Thirty-ninth street and Park avenue, hardly a stone's toss from the Grand Central Station, the Sculptors' Guild has opened the town's first big out-of-door sculpture show. Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt is a patroness, of course, and we Murray Hillbillies are paying our silver offerings for a look at what the sculptors are up to these days. It's all new to us, but very interesting.

When I saw the Paris off the other day, among the passengers was that fascinating little serio-comic dancer, Trudi Schoop. After talking a bit about the work of herself and troupe, Trudi hit a new high for artistic frankness when she said "We sing a little, too, but it doesn't sound very nice!"

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Barrett Kiesling, Author, Observer and Publicist, Makes Known Plans of M-G-M and Its Major Stars

Many Fine Pictures Are on Season's Schedule, With "Marie Antoinette" Topping List; Joan Crawford May Appear in Musical; Marguerita Sylia Is Gracious Artiste; Bartlett Out, Marshall In; "Big Show" on Sunday; Notes of the Theater, Its People.

SO Mr. Barrett Kiesling, that peregrinating pundit of the "pitcher" business, breezed gaily into town yesterday and was cocktailed and hors d'oeuvred in the rooms of the Variety Club in the Willard Hotel.

Since Mr. Kiesling represents Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, his host yesterday afternoon, as usual, was Carter Barron, Eastern Division Manager of Loew's, Inc., the affiliate exhibition twin of the producing organization. Mr. Kiesling, as always, was in fine fettle, as the saying goes.

BELL.

Mr. Kiesling, by the way, is a patient young man, who spends a good many months every year living in a suitcase. His present junket contemplates a tour of 67 cities and will continue until July 31. His primary object in making all of the so-called key cities of the country is to determine in what manner his company's service to the drama desks of the Nation may be improved.

With so perfected an organization as M-G-M there is no great room for improvement, although we expressed a few private prejudices that may or may not bear fruit—if a prejudice ever bears fruit.

As a secondary function, Mr. Kiesling is popping off in impressive syllables concerning the prospective merits of such of his companies' productions as "Marie Antoinette," starring Norma Shearer—confidently expected to be one of the greatest pictures of all time—"Northwest Passage," "Toy Wife," starring Luise Rainer, two-time Academy award winner; "Test Pilot," with Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy; "Too Hot to Handle," an epic of the newsreel boys; "Shopworn Angel," starring Margaret Sullavan; "Boys' Town," again with Spencer Tracy, and a long list of other imminent releases from the studios he serves so ably as an itinerant representative.

It will be recalled that Mr. Kiesling was the author of one of the most informative books ever written on the subject of fabrication of motion pictures and the manner in which they should be appraised by the lay public. That volume should be universally adopted as the text-book of screen gazing—as it largely has been by this department.

For six weeks, Barrett has been in New York working on another book to be called "A Lion Roars," in collaboration with Howard Dietz, playwright, librettist and lyricist, who, between times, serves as publicity director for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

This work will encompass the complete story of the development of the Marcus Loew enterprises, from the nickelodeon days of 1903 to the present era of a $142,000,000 corporation. It should make as interesting reading as that earlier survey of a similar scene written by Will Irwin, in celebration of the development of Paramount, under the managerial direction of Adolph Zukor.

I hope I get an advance copy.

At yesterday afternoon's party it was a pleasure to have the privilege of having a brief chat with one of the distinguished personalities of the operatic and operetta stages. This was Marguerite Sylva, a notable "Carmen" and an international star of a few years ago, who this week is appearing in an important role in the Snuberts' production of "Three Waltzes," at the National.

In Monday morning's review of "The Three Waltzes" we had something to say of Miss Sylva's striking beauty and enduring youthfulness. Having viewed her performance from the fourth row, and yesterday having chatted with her from an adjoining chair, this column now wishes to plead guilty to any charges that may be made of gross understatement.

It was Frederic William Wile, political writer, and an old friend of Miss Sylva, who made it possible for me to meet this charming star and her daughter—who, incidentally also is in "Three Waltzes"—and I am grateful to him.

• • • •

The weather, as yet, hasn't been quite all that it should have been, but Glen Echo Park has been booming along in fine fashion for all of that. There is something about the place that seems to "get" the resident gentry as no other al fresco resort in this vicinity does. With the exception of the Crystal Pool and one or two other strictly "hot weather" features, all of the 50-odd attractions at Glen Echo are running full blast and blasting the populace for a full evening's entertainment.

• • • •

It was one of Mr. Kiesling's interesting disclosures yesterday afternoon that Joan Crawford, now in New York, brought her voice instructor East with her and is going in seriously for development of genuine proficiency as a vocalist.

It is not an impossibility that Miss Crawford may be seen on the stage in a musical vehicle within the next year or so. The experience will not be totally strange to her. Miss Crawford as Lucille Le Sueur began her career as a dancer in the chorus of Broadway productions and graduated to Hollywood on the impetus of her own confidence in her ability to make good and a Spartan courage and determination.

It will be interesting to those who "remember when" to see what happens in the new adventure.

• • • •

And that Kiesling "afternoon tea" doesn't end it. Today who comes along but Allan Jones, tenor singing star of many recent pictures—"The Firefly" and "Everybody Sing," to name only two—to headline the stage bill at Loew's Capitol Theater. Mr. Jones will be feted informally on Saturday, probably after his first stage appearance, somewhere within the confines of the Capitol edifice—and that ought to be sufficiently vague to baffle the autograph hunters—also by Mr. Barron. Since beginning his personal appearance tour in New York recently, the affable and extremely gifted Mr. Jones has been no less than a boxoffice sensation. At least, that is the way it is told to me.

• • • •

Of course you know by now that Michael Bartlett is leaving the cast of "Three Waltzes" tomorrow night to return to the West Coast and that his place will be taken by Everett Marshall. Since Mr. Bartlett is a high tenor and Mr. Marshall a barytone, the consequence is that this substitution entails a transposition of practically all of the Hohenbrunn musical numbers—and they are many—into a lower key.

It looks from this distance a little like a suspension of the "battle of the high notes," now being waged at every performance by Kitty Carlisle and Mr. Bartlett—and they have been mellifluous and delightful battles with a fine spirit of friendliness and camaraderie on both sides. I shall be sorry to see them end—if they do.

• • • •

But the "big show" comes off in the main banquet hall of the Mayflower on Sunday evening. It is then that the Fathers and Sons banquet, held annually under the sponsorship of the Brotherhood of the The hour of this adult-juvenile fracas has been considerably advanced this year in order not to keep the youngsters up too late and still run off all of the superlative entertainment features that have been arranged for their enjoyment under the general chairmanship of Sidney B. Lust. There will be circus, stage, screen radio and celebrity stunts, almost beyond your ability to count, on the program. For this reason, the goings-on will begin at 5 p. m., with the banquet served promptly at 6. Motion pictures will be shown and important prizes will be awarded to a considerable percentage of the kids present with their dads. It is a fine spirit, as I have said many times before, that pervades these annual affairs. This year's promises to furnish the capstone of them all.

Veteran Comic Back at Capitol

famous vaudevillian, who, in partnership with Rose King, long has been one of the headliners of the "variety" stage, will share stellar honors with Allan Jones, singing star of the films, on the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning today. Mr. Yorke's unctuous humor has been one of the mainstays of vaudeville through the years—there are even some younger "Yorke and Kings" who follow in the old man's footsteps.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., April 21.—I wonder if you have any idea of the influence films have on the lives of our people. I had a long chat about this with Arthur Hornblow, the Paramount producer who is the envy of all because he is married to Myrna Loy.

HEDDA HOPPER.

Two months after the release of "Waikiki Wedding" reservations to the Islands had tripled. "Sweet Leilani" had been written and recorded two years before Bing Crosby came across it. Orchestras wouldn't play it—couldn't, in fact, until they had gotten a steel guitar. Now no orchestra would dream of being without one. A week after the picture opened, Paramount received a wire from Atlantic City asking for permission to change the name of a big night club there to Blue Heaven.

Arthur Hornblow firmly believes "Tropic Holiday" will do as much for Mexico as the above did for the islands. He's brought out the colorful, charming side of the lives of Mexicans—dress and customs. Heretofore we've shown them principally as bandits and cut-throats. Goodness knows we have scads of those here, too. What a relief to see the gentle, poetic side of our Mexican neighbors for a change.

Hooray for Glenda Farrell and Barton MacLane, who are switching from those wise-cracking smarties in the "Torchy Lane" pictures and are now going straight for Universal. If "Little Caesar" Robinson and "Sock-in-the-Eye" Cagney can swing from gangsters to district attorneys, I see no reason Glenda and Bart shouldn't turn about. They've switched in the nick of time.

The "Robin Hood" archery tournament at Palm Springs Sunday brought more reservations than Easter.

How many of you remember about the stray arrow which twanged through the air in New York City, landing in the seat of a tailor on Fifth avenue while he was fitting a pair of trousers.

When Doug Fairbanks finished "Robin Hood," he took bows and arrows with him—he'd become so crazy about archery he didn't want to grow stale. So he was zinging them off the Ritz roof when the poor little tailor, only minding his own business, got stuck on the receiving end. I doubt if Doug has even twanged one since.

Which reminds me of a near-accident I almost got mixed up in. Two ladies from first families here had gone shooting with the chief of police. One of them has developed into a fine shot. I've never gone in for firearms. So in order to have a little fun they took me along—then ganged up on me. I was given a .45. Our patient Chief Davis was instructing me what to do. I was tired, so he said: "You'd better rest before you shoot." As I put my hand down, the blooming thing went off, missing his toe by an inch. Imagine missing fame by an inch! Rotten luck.

Do you remember Ted Pickham? He was going to open an escort service here for lonely ladies. He did a lot of peekin' on the story. Then the studio got around and asked him to be in it. His modesty made them blush. All he wanted was $10,000.

I still think escort service is a good idea. Dangerous, yes. We service everything. Why not ladies?

CAUSE: After the close of "Yr. Obedient Husband," Fredric March and his wife, Florence Eldridge, announced that, for a while at least, they would vacation from all things theatrical . . . On May 3, however, the Marches will emerge from their retreat. Despite attractive offers to broadcast for the network stations they will appear on Station WQXR without pay. The pogram will be sponsored by one of the country's most worthwhile organizations, the American Union for Democracy . . . Newbold Morris, head of the City Council, and Alice Duer Miller, the distinguished writer, also will broadcast.

Rains' Cider Is Not Real Thing

All the rackets aren't operated in Hollywood. Claude Rains found this out when he reached his Pennsylvania farm and discovered that two young men have been selling Claude Rains cider in Philadelphia and New York and making good money at it. The cider was supposed to have been made on his farm by the film star.

"I understand that some of it has been shipped to Hollywood," Rains wrote film friends. "If you hear reports that there is Claude Rains cider on the market will you put a stop to its sale? It isn't mine."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

June Brides-to-Be Ask Such Questions as Whom to Invite, What to Wear, What About Reception, Etc.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have so many relatives and friends that I just don't know where to draw the line in sending out wedding invitations. If I invite those persons the family thinks should be invited, the guest list will be composed entirely of older persons, with none of my young friends present. I am to have a home wedding and the house is small, so I don't know what to do.

• • • •

The only solution I can imagine is to have only members of the family or else be married at the rectory and ask people to a reception afterward. There are to be no members of the bridegroom's family present. Should they be invited anyway? Please answer this week.

BRIDE-TO-BE.

• • • •

DEAR BRIDE-TO-BE: The happiest compromise, it seems to me, is to follow your own idea of asking only members of the family to a quiet home wedding, and asking all your friends, both young and old, to a reception immediately following the ceremony. It may reassure you to know that one of the smartest weddings of the current week followed this exact procedure.

• • • •

Even though members of the bridegroom's family will not be present, they should be sent invitations to both wedding and reception. If their absence from the wedding is due to circumstances outside their control, such as distance or illness; if they approve of the match and have made cordial overtures to the bride or her family through correspondence or personal call since the engagement was announced, they should be shown the further courtesy of an informal note accompanying the invitations, saying how much they will be missed; how much their presence would have added to happiness of the occasion. Such a note may be sent under separate cover, and written either by the bride or her mother, bespeaking the sentiments of both. If their absence from the wedding is a gesture of disapproval of the match, the formal invitations constitute sufficient acknowledgment of their existence. M. H.

Bridegroom's Apparel.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am to be married in June and plan to have a formal wedding. My fiance and I are wondering if it is absolutely necessary to have a reception afterward. Also, would it be proper for the bridegroom and the ushers to wear white suits for an evening wedding? If not, what sort of suit would be required?

J. J. C.

• • • •

DEAR J. J. C.: Inasmuch as this is a free and socially democratic country, nobody is going to require you to supplement your formal wedding with a reception. Nevertheless, there is no getting around the fact that a reception customarily follows the truly formal wedding ceremony However, it is always infinitely better form to plan one's wedding in accordance with one's means and circumstances, than it is to attempt the well-nigh impossible in order to copy the pattern of the moneyed aristocrats.

• • • •

White suits for men, while acceptable summer evening wear in southern climates, are not considered formal evening dress. They are the summer synonym for the winter dinner jacket, which is, of course, informal evening attire. However, since tails are almost never worn by men in summer, the men in your wedding party will be following customary usage in wearing white suits. The white mess jacket is considered more formal wear, and dark coats with white trousers, more informal than the all-white suit. M. H.

Paper Plates Taboo.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Would it be proper to use dainty decorated paper plates and napkins at an afternoon wedding reception for 75 persons? Your advice will be greatly appreciated. M. A.

• • • •

DEAR M. A.: Paper plates and napkins are entirely too makeshift in nature to have a part in the table service at an afternoon wedding reception, which presupposes some careful advance planning. To use them would be to reduce the affair to the status of a last-minute picnic. Borrow china from all your neighbors, friends and relatives, if you must; or buy it by the gross from the 10-cent store, but serve your guests from bonafide tableware. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Ice Cream Healthful.

WE HAVE NOT nearly enough records in the history of the race of the delight which men have experienced when they first sampled a brand new invention in the culinary arts. Lamb's dissertation on roast pig is the best and nearly the only one that comes to mind.

What must have been the sensation and the lifting of the heart when Catherine de Medici introduced the jaded appetites of the French court to ice cream.

Ice cream had a complicated ancestor. It was said that the Emperor Nero combined snow from the mountain passes with fresh fruit juices. Marco Polo discovered frozen milk ices in Asia and introduced them into Italy. Catherine de Medici brought them from Italy to France. Charles I of England brought over a French chef and ice cream became the favorite dish of the English court. It is said that New Yorkers first sampled the delicacy when a London confectioner opened a shop not far from the Battery in pre-Revolutionary days. Dolly Madison introduced it into the White House at a White House dinner.

The first manufacture of ice cream on an industrial basis was begun by Jacob Fussel in Baltimore in 1851.

Our commercial production of ice cream gets a big jump this month. In 1937 the United States consumed 265,227,000 gallons of ice cream. Drug stores market nearly 30 per cent of the output.

I am surprised to find that about 56 per cent of American ice cream is flavored with vanilla and only 10 per cent chocolate. I would have thought that the chocolate was much higher. Strawberry flavor is next in frequency with 8 per cent.

Of course, like so many articles that bring pleasure and are pleasant to the palate, ice cream was at first condemned by the kill-joys of the world. It was said to cause dyspepsia; that it chilled the stomach and stopped the process of digestion. Quite the contrary from being a harmful food, ice cream and its cousins, the ices, are very good foods. The stomach has a remarkable capacity for reduing all foods which enter it to the same temperature.

Ice cream contains calcium, phosphorus, iron and a high quality of protein, sugar and butter fat. All of these are essential for the balanced chemistry of digestion and for the proper nourishment of the body—bone, muscle and nerve.

Babies and convalescents eat it because doctors and diet experts recommend it. Millions of others eat it because it gives them quick nourishment and because they like it.

Quaintness Is Popular.

Paris (U.P.).—Chanel is full of quaint ideas for evening. Neat, but not gaudy, is a white dress with fitted, low-cut bodice and flaring skirt—sleeveless, of course—but worn with starched white lace cuffs about 5 inches long on both wrists. Earrings that link like huge magnolia blossoms cover the ears completely, and bear out the color scheme.

Smart and Practical Costumes for Business Girl

A trio of spring costumes for the business girl who must look to her budget and plan her wardrobe wisely as well as smartly. Above is a frock of cotton lace, appropriate for the office and then on to dinner; the shirtmaker styling is a smart style note. At top, right, the dark suspender dress accented with a contrasting blouse and matching sheer wool jacket, is a striking office and after ensemble; the jacket may be worn with evening gowns. The twin print costume (right), is one of the most practical and popular in the season's style scene. White pique trimming enhances the styling. The full length coat can top other dresses with fashion assurance; the print dress in turn, may be worn with various coats and jackets of dark or light harmonizing color tones.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

The Way to Remedy Fat Legs Is to Do Stretching Exercises.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THREE OF THE PRETTIEST pairs of legs in pictures belong to stars so different in type and structure that you would never imagine them having leg measurements exactly the same. Eleanor Powell, Ginger Rogers and Alice Faye certainly do not look alike, and a check of their weights, heights and measurements results in three very different sets of figures—except for the legs.

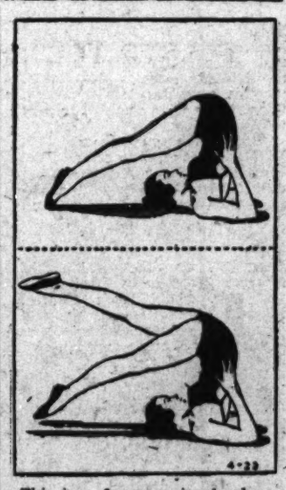
When you think about it, you can understand why. Beauty depends upon proportion and proportion depends, mainly, upon exercise. That the Rogers, Fay and Powell limbs are perfectly proportioned is evident from these measurements: Thigh, 19½ inches; calf, 12½ inches; ankle, 8 inches. More important than weight or structure is the background of dancing which these stars have in common.

Cycling Good Exercise.

The regular exercise afforded by the inexorable routine of dancing is the main factor in the perfection of these famous legs. Even when Eleanor Powell and Ginger Rogers lose weight, as they often do in the making of a picture, their limbs remain shapely, thanks to beautifully developed musculature!

But if you are the average person, the dancing you do is not enough to matter and that curve from calf to ankle could be improved. Instead of figuring out shortcuts to save time and steps, it would be a worthwhile idea to patronize the stairways and to walk at every opportunity. And unless you take up dancing, you will want to know how to duplicate its good results. That you can do with exercise.

For too thin legs there are developing exercises in which the muscles are contracted. Pedaling a bike combines contracting exercises with stretching, and is fine leg exercise, but if you are primarily interested in developing your legs, stick to contracting exercises in which the toes are pointed. Try walking up and down stairs on your toes. Lie on the floor on your back, toss your heels up over your head so that your toes can strike the floor beyond, point the toes, keep the knees straight and paddle; that is, make the kick stroke, as in swimming. That's good exercise for too thin legs.



This is a fine exercise for legs that are too thin.

Stretching Suggested.

Legs that are too fat need exercise of the stretching type. You can stretch your leg muscles by pointing the heels like this: Sit flat on the floor, with the legs apart and backs of knees close against the floor. Reach forward with the hands and grasp the toes firmly, then pull gently toward you.

Stand between two chairs with seats turned in, and partially supporting yourself with the hands on the chair seats, stand on one leg. Hold the other leg, knee straight, in front of the body, and point the heel; that is, curl the toes up toward the instep. Slowly lower the body toward the floor. Repeat with the other leg. Perform the same exercises, but point the toes of the outstretched leg. Do not try to perform the exercise more than twice a day for the first week. Eventually you should be able to do it without the aid of the chairs.

Thin Ones Develop Best if Toe-Pointing Work Is Adhered To.

Man on the Loose

"What I want to know is—where have you been all this time? . . . No. Really I mean it. You know there's something about you—well, what I mean is, you and I ought to be pals . . . Say waiter! Bring us some more gin fizzes.

"Say, what are you doing tonight? . . . Oh I just thought we could go to some little place and have a nice dinner . . . you know, together . . . and talk . . . Oh come now, don't start that! You do too know me well enough . . . Say, you and I are pals, aren't we? . . . Besides, you only live once.

"You know I like you . . . Now, now, don't move over. I'm not trying to be fresh . . . or anything like that. What I'm trying to say is we understand each other . . . Say, I just want to ask you this—don't we understand each other?

"Say, this is certainly nice being here together . . . just us two. What I want to know is—why didn't we discover each other years ago? . . . You know what I'd like to do? . . . I'd like to take you on a float trip—I know a river at home. You don't know how wonderful it'd be, us two out there all alone . . . together, I mean all together . . . alone, well what I mean is, just the two of us.

"Now, now, don't look that way! I don't mean anything . . . What I mean is with us it's different . . . it's more like a . . . a beautiful friendship. Say, let's have another gin fizz.

"Well, what about tonight? . . . Tomorrow? . . . Say, you wouldn't make me wait another whole day before I got to see you again! . . . Besides I can't tell how long I'll be in town. You see, if this deal goes through—say, do you know what I'm going to do if this deal goes through? I'm going to buy an island! . . . Yes!

Say if this deal goes through, I ought to clean up a million and a half. I'm going to get an island—I know the very one, just off Florida—and take you to it. Won't that be swell? Just us two . . . together on an island!

"What? . . . Tonight! You can? . . . Good! . . . tomorrow night, too! . . . We-l-l. If I'm still here . . . Breakfast? . . . Well I don't know. I've got to see a fellow pretty early about that deal . . . Now, now, don't take that attitude. I think it'd be swell for us to have breakfast together, only . . .

"The float trip? . . . You can! . . . Fine! . . . We-l-l no, I hardly know what time—yet. Say, I'll write you about it later . . . No, no I don't think you ought to plan it for your vacation too definitely—yet . . . that is, you see . . .

Tomorrow night? . . . Well I tell you, I'll stay if I possibly can . . . Oh now, no it's not that I don't want to stay over . . . I'll do my best . . . Only well, you see, I really ought to be home by the day after tomorrow . . . Yes . . . Well you see it's this way, I promised my wife—"

Crucial Decisions.

Whether she shall set off an explosion at breakfast by asking her husband what kind of meat he wants for dinner, or go ahead and use her own judgment only to have him thunder at night, "What! Roast beef again!"

Whether when her friends admire the unusual little print she is wearing, she shall pretend it came from an exclusive shoppe or vaunt her cleverness by revealing she got it for $10.95 at a new little place she has discovered.

Whether she shall let Junior express himself fully and develop into a spoiled brat and end in the penitentiary, or keep him in his place and have him develop an inferiority complex and wind up in a sanitarium.

Whether she shall wear herself out entertaining her husband's newest ingenue flame and cure him quickly or let it drag on and on until he yells "Mamma."

Jan Kiepura Entertains Notables At Brilliant Polish Embassy Party

Count Potocki Plays Host at Dinner and Musicale; Peruvian, Cuban and German Ambassadors Among Distinguished Guests.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Add another to the list of Poland's victories on the Washington social front. The musicale following the dinner at the Polish Embassy last night was one of the high lights of the season—any way you look at it. With the popular Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, as host . . . the lively Polish tenor, Jan Kiepura, as artist for the evening . . . and a flock of top-flight social notables among the guests, the party was a red-letter event from first to last.

HOPE R. MILLER.

The program gave Mr. Kiepura a chance to make his Capital debut before the cream of Washington society; and it gave Washington society the chance of this season to meet an artist who has won fame and fortune on screen and stage. Many in last night's audience recalled having seen Kiepura with Gladys Swarthout and Philip Merivale in "Give Us This Night." Others remembered that his attractive wife, Marta Eggerth, who was also present, made a name for herself in films and concert in Europe long before her talented husband won his laurels in the Metropolitan Opera.

There was another in the audience, who added luster to the scene. Miss Kitty Carlisle, star of the current play at the National Theater, arrived late—having after her evening's performance—and completely stole the spotlight as Count Potocki ushered her down the center aisle and seated her in the front row next to Dr. Hans Kindler.

A few minutes before, she had met Mr. Kiepura in the salon next to the ballroom, where the musicale was held. After their introduction, accompanied by a brief explanation on the part of Count Potocki, who mentioned that Miss Carlisle was a fellow artist, Mr. Kiepura asked, "Oh, do you sing?" Gowned in a bouffant white net frock, trimmed in squares of gold sequins and a gold belt, and worn with long gold kid gloves, Miss Carlisle easily captured fashion laurels for evening, although there were a number of lovely ladies whose frocks made fashion news. Miss Eggerth in an ice blue gown, especially becoming to her blonde hair, was the center of admiring eyes all evening.

Many Notables Among the Guests.

The musicale took place in the newly decorated ballroom, where gold chairs, arranged in rows, were soon filled. Many guests sat in the adjoining salon through the entire program, but although they could not watch Mr. Kiepura while he sang, they had plenty of opportunity to see him. Between his numbers he strolled out through the adjoining room, smiling broadly at the guests and seeming to enjoy this part of his performance as much as the other.

In the musicale company were the 24 guests whom Count Potocki entertained at dinner, and about 100 others. The dinner list included the Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, who makes no pretenses about enjoying musicales but is invited out to them regularly just the same; the Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga; the German Ambassador and Frau Dieckhoff; the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos; the Latvian Minister and Mme. Alfred Bilmanis; Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, the latter a stately figure in a frock of white crepe, trimmed with fringe; Representative and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, she gowned in grey lace and chiffon; Mr. and Mrs. Pierrepont Moffat; Mrs. Eleanor Patterson; Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, in a chic black frock styled with a slit skirt; Mrs. Truxton Beale, in a black dress, set off with white accents; Mrs. James M. Beck.

Many Diplomats Glimpsed in Crowd.

Also, the Counselor of the Polish Embassy, Witold Wancowicz, and Mme. Wancowicz, who recently returned from Poland, and who was one of the handsomest women present last evening in her severely simple black frock, fashioned with a long scarf; Michael Budy, of the Embassy staff, and Count Alfred Potocki, who received with his brother.

Others there included Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, gowned in black net; Ralph Hill, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, in a powder blue frock, set off with puffed fur sleeves; Princess Boncompagne; Clarence Hewes, Senator and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis; Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. William R. Castle, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Gerard Walravens, of the Belgian Embassy; Charles Lucet, of the French Embassy, and Mme. Lucet, and many others.

Warrenton residents turned their attention yesterday from horse races of weddings, as the biggest nuptial event of the season took place when Miss Helen Warren Buchanan was married there to William Standley Stokes, jr.

The bride is the daughter of John Buchanan, of Warrenton, and Mrs. Lester Buchanan, of this city, and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Standley Stokes, of Philadelphia.

The ceremony took place in St. James Church, which was decorated for the occasion with calla lilies, white smilax, palms and ferns. The Rev. Arthur Kinsolving, uncle of the bride, officiated, with the Rev. Paul Bowden assisting.

Wears Lace Cap That Is Heirloom.

The ivory satin gown worn by the bride was made with a long train, and her tulle veil was held by a lace cap which had been worn by her grandmother. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Marjorie Morton, the maid of honor, was gowned in orchid net made with puffed sleeves, and a matching net cap with a brief face veil and a bouquet of spring flowers completed her costume.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Bettina Belmont, Austine McDonnell, Betty Charrington, Jane Calvert, Brunner Huneman, of Philadelphia; Mary Dougherty, Jane Wilbur and Ruth Ryan, of New York. Two were gowned in blue, two in yellow, and two in green, their frocks being made like that of the maid of honor.

Irimescu Calls At White House

Owing to the protocol which prevents many foreign envoys in Washington from acepting social engagements until they have duly presented their credentials to the President, the Rumanian Minister, Radu Irimescu, has hitherto declined all formal invitations.

Yesterday afternoon, however, found him wending his way to the White House, all dressed up in uniform, with cocked hat, and papers done up in seals under his arm. In celebration of the event, George Duca, Second Secretary of the Legation, entertained at a cocktail party later in the afternoon in honor of his boss. The affair was held in the host's apartment on Fifteenth street, and was attended by several members of the younger set, as well as a few of M. Irimescu's colleagues in the Diplomatic Corps.

Mme. Irimescu was attired in a navy blue gown with which she wore hat and veil of matching color. She was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Green, who is here from New York for the week-end.

Mrs. Seton Guest Of Mrs. Watson and Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer

"Never a dull moment" was the motto of the stunt party given last evening in honor of Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton by Mrs. Dorothy De Muth Watson and Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer. Boncescos Pack For Departure To Homeland

Financial Counselor of Rumania and Wife to Leave Early in May.

The Rumanian Legation is full of comings and goings these days.

The latest in the line of departures concerns the Financial Counselor and Mme. George Boncesco. The former has been transferred to the home office in Bucharest, and the couple are beginning to pack their trunks for a departure either May 1 or 2. Their sailing date from New York is scheduled for the middle of May.

The Boncescos, when one considers the transient habits of the diplomatic corps, are practically cave-dwellers, for they came to Washington in 1927—11 years ago.

They are old friends of the new Rumanian Minister and Mme. Radu Irimesco, whom they entertained at a "reunion" dinner the very evening when the Irimescos arrived in Washington to take up official duties here. Now the Minister and his wife will no doubt return the compliment of "auld lang syne" at a farewell party.

Mme. Boncesco has astounded Capital society by wearing a monocle, charmed it by her dynamic personality, and given it "food for thought" at many parties at which artists musicians or playwrights have been the guests of honor.

No one has been named to take Mr. Boncesco's place at the Legation and it is possible that the post may not be filled immediately.

Miss Laura Sloo Johnson Wed To Harry L. Smith in Cathedral

Hessler Studio.

MRS. HARRY LEROY SMITH.

Couple Will Return to D. C. From Italy to Make Their Home.

Washington Cathedral last evening was the scene of the wedding of Miss Laura Sloo Johnson to Harry Leroy Smith. The Rev. Ze Barney Phillips, of Epiphany Church, officiated at the ceremony at 8 o'clock. The couple on their return from Italy will make their home in Washington.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Bridges Johnson while Mr. Smith is the son of Mrs. Thomas Willard Smith.

Attired in white satin, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown was fashioned with a long, flowing train and she wore a veil of English rosepoint which had belonged to her great-aunt, Mrs. Charles Morgan Whitney. She carried a shower bouquet.

Mrs. Alfred Adair Watters, of New Orleans, was her matron of honor, and was costumed in aqua marquisette, fashioned with a silver gray redingote coat. Her flowers were pink roses.

"Randy" Richardson Among Bridesmaids.

The bridesmaids included Miss Randolph Richardson, Miss Mannevillette Sullivan, Miss Nancy Wright, and Miss Lady Betty Chandler. Miss Richardson and Miss Wright were in pink marquisette with a silver redingcte, while Miss Sullivan and Miss Chandler wore yellow marquisette. All carried Talisman roses. Florence Holleman served as junior bridesmaid.

Sydney Bernard Smith was his brother's best man. Ushers were William Bridges Johnson, jr., brother of the bride; Clyde William Smith, another brother of the bridegroom; Richard E. Adloff, jr.; Charles Effinger Smoot, Richard Wallace Beers and Stephen Albertson Trodden.

At the wedding reception, Mrs. Johnson, mother of the bride, wore a gown of orchid chiffon, while Mrs. Smith, mother of the bridegroom, was dressed in dusty rose chiffon.

The former Miss Johnson is an alumna of Duke University. The bridegroom attended the Universite de Paris, and is a graduate of Georgetown University, George Washington University and the Law School of Southeastern University.

Mrs. Rūggles Honored at Tea

Mrs. Nelson J. Ruggles, of Columbus, Ohio, was guest of honor at a tea given yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis in their home on Massachusetts avenue.

Among the guests were members of the Ohio delegation to the D. A. R.—as many, at least, as Mrs. Ellis has happened to see in the past few days when she has been attending meetings of the convention.

Others there included Mrs. William E. Borah, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol and George Baxter, who is playing in "The Three Waltzes," current operetta at the National Theater. Mr. Baxter's father, George Baxter, sr., was connected with the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune when Mr. Ellis was editor of that newspaper.

Give Luncheon..

Mrs. Wright Patman, wife of Representative Patman of Texas, yesterday gave a luncheon at the Congressional Club for the wives of members of Congress from Texas, and a few additional friends.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

WHEN we last crossed the Atlantic five or six years ago, there was on the same small boat an eager young barytone who used to keep everybody awake by singing loudly in the bathroom. His name was Michael Bartlett. He was not as widely known then as he is now, and the music we heard for nothing was not so thoroughly appreciated as it is today.

DUDLEY HARMON.

During his week's stay in Washington, where with Kitty Carlisle he has the lead in "The Three Waltzes," Bartlett is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. James Mitchell. He arrived here with a letter from Edward Melcher, formerly of this city, now of Hollywood, and a close friend of James Mitchell, jr. But the Mitchells have seen very little of their guest, as he has flown up to New York nearly every day and back again for the evening performance.

Bartlett is a member of an old New England family from Oxford, Mass., and is a Princeton graduate. He has been so busy that he has refused all invitations except one from the President and Mrs. Roosevelt to take tea at the White House earlier in the week.

THE NEW Brazilian Ambassador, Mario Brandao, arrived in Washington with probably the least fanfare ever to greet an envoy, because his train got in at 1:25 yesterday morning. At that, though, the entire staff of the Brazilian embassy stayed up to go down to Union Station and meet him.

• • • •

Capital residents were busy yesterday at their favorite indoor sport—cocktail parties. There were at least half a dozen on the calendar, and among those entertaining were the Naval Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Sueyro; the First Secretary of the German Embassy and Frau von Stolzman, and Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, who asked a few friends in to meet some newspaper editors here from all over the country for their convention.

• • • •

THE Sueyro party was very large and very official. It was held in the Presidential room of the Mayflower. Senora de Sueyro received her guests wearing a long gown of navy blue chiffon with a jacket and short puffed sleeves. A corsage of gardenias and a string of pearls completed her costume.

The Mayflower cocktail party menu was served, with the usual delicious thin sandwiches, olives, dried herring on toast, and caviar. There was also ice cream and cake. The table was centered with a thin silver vase in which were bright red poppies and baby's breath.

Among those who called during the afternoon were Mrs. Claude Swanson and Capt. and Mrs. John Beardall. Capt. Beardall is aide to the Secretary of the Navy. The Argentine Ambasador, Felipe Espil, was glimpsed in conversation with the Peruvian envoy, Manuel de Freyry Santander. The Ecuadorean Ambasador and Senora de Aljaro; the Military Attache of the German Embassy and Frau von Boetticher; Capt. Paul Benech of the French Embassy, Commander Paul Reis of the Brazilian Embassy, and Mrs. F. C. Bradley, wife of the British Naval Attache, were others present from the diplomatic corps.

Our Navy was further represented by Commander and Mrs. Harold J. Nelson and Capt. and Mrs. Robert Munroe.

Meanwhile, the First Secretary of the German Embassy and Frau von Stolzmann were entertaining at a smaller and more informal party at their residence in Spring Valley. They lease their house from Byron Price, former head of the Associated Press office here who now works in New York.

Spring Valley is absolutely at its best these days, with all the avenues lined with flowering dogwood trees. Most of the guests yesterday elected to wander about in the Stolzmanns' attractive garden, where there is a flagged terrace.

Those present at this congenial party included residents, diplomats, and several members of the press.

South African Envoy, Mrs. Close Hold 'At Home' in Lovely Setting

By Elizabeth Ford.

A lovely setting for any party, the South African Legation outdid even itself yesterday afternoon when the Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close were "at home" to the members of the Washington branch of the English Speaking Union.

Guests chatted through the rooms, filled with fragrant apple blossoms, pink carnations, lush roses, and came back for more glimpses of the garden and an extra sip of real South African wine.

In the receiving line were the Minister and Mrs. Close, the latter wearing a chiffon afternoon gown of pale pink and soft gray patterns on a dark background. Then as members of the union marched on to the buffet table in the paneled dining room, they were greeted by Mrs. W. S. Mann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Close. Mrs. Mann was attired in a floor-length dress of dove-gray chiffon, fashioned with diaphanous panels thrown across the shoulders and draped at the back.

Sir Ronald Lindsay made a brief but popular appearance midway through the festivities; and a little later, the Canadian Minister's wife, Lady Marler, in trim black crepe, arrived accompanied by Miss Willa Magee who was dressed in brown with a criss-cross pattern of white. Lady Lindsay was also present.

Guests also eddied about Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, the latter attired in a dark blue dress and a cherry-red straw hat. Others glimpsed among the many present were Miss Bertha Noyes, in a brown suit; Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis, Baroness von Below, the Rev. Ze Barney Phillips, of Epiphany Church; Lewis Lofton Moneyway, president of the Arts Club, and Mrs. Mary Bruce-Wallace.

Others present yesterday were Mrs. Joseph Washington, Mrs. James Houghteling, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Flint, Admiral and Mrs. William H. Bell, Mrs. Alanson Houghton, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Naude, Mrs. Alvin Strong, Miss Irene Boyle, Mrs. Merchant Mahoney and her daughter, Peggy, from the Canadian Legation, and Capt. and Mrs. F. C. Bradley from the British Embassy.

Bentonelli Due To Recite Here

He'll Sing at Congressional Club Breakfast on Monday.

Joseph Bentonelli, leading tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has been announced as the artist for the Congressional Club breakfast at which Mrs. Roosevelt will be guest of honor Monday. The affair will be given at 12 o'clock at the Mayflower with Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, president of the club, presiding.

During the short visit in Washington Mr. Bentonelli and his accompanist, Merl Freeland, will be the guests of Representative and Mrs. Wilburn Cartwright, of Oklahoma, in their home on Capitol Hill. Mrs. Cartwright was piano instructor in Oklahoma University during the time that Joe Benton was a student there, and she served as his accompanist on many occasions.

Mr. Bentonelli is a native of western Oklahoma. Having received his college education and early voice training at the University of Oklahoma, he went to Italy for further study and soon was recognized there as having a voice of unusual quality and endurance. His name was Joseph Benton, but because of the splendid reception given him by the Italian people, he changed his name to Giuseppe Bentonelli. Upon his return to America and subsequent debut with the Metropolitan Opera Company he compromised by using the name Joseph Bentonelli.

Kenwood Picks Diffenbaugh; Nats Face Yankees

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, April 21.

Evidence is beginning to pile up to dispute the Yankees' front-office claim that Joe DiMaggio's was an unconditional surrender in his holdout war with the New York club. Baseball men here who were advised by the Yankee's management that the San Francisco Italian had signed at the club's figures are more than slightly skeptical.

POVICH.

In today's newspapers, the general answer of the baseball press was:

"Oh Yeah?"

One baseball man was very much surprised that the Yankees should expect to get away with a claim of victory over DiMaggio in the salary holdout procedeings. "It's a laugh," he said. "If DiMaggio had signed before the season had opened, the Yankee business office might have put across that idea. But now . . . it's ridiculous!"

He went on to point out that the Yankees were virtually forced to sign DiMaggio—if not at his $40,000 demands then at a figure in excess of their $25,000 ultimatum which was acceptable to the Frisco Flailer.

"This is no time for the Yankees to be claiming a victory over DiMaggio," he was saying. "It's clear that the Yankees were forced to compromise with him. Why, DiMaggio was in a better position to enforce his demands yesterday then he ever was during the winter. Without him, the Yankees were panicky after losing two of their first three games.

* * * *

New York's Funny.

"But to understand fully the DiMaggio holdout question, one must understand the New York baseball setup. There are conditions here that are different from those of any other city. A New York club must have a winner, or it can take a terrific loss on the season.

"Firstly, the Yankees are always in a battle for patronage with the Giants. Somehow, all those World Series victories haven't seemed to give the Yankees much of an edge with the New York fans. The Giants draw about as well at the Polo Grounds as the Yanks do at the stadium. Without an attraction such as DiMaggio, the Yanks might go into an awful skid—especially with the Italian populace who have been making the season a financial success for the Yankees for two years now.

"New York fans are probably different than those of any other city in the big leagues. I mean they can sour faster on an also ran. Fans of another town might be satisfied with a second place or first division club, but not New Yorkers. A new club that doesn't win the pennant is regarded as much of a loser as a team that finishes eighth.

Have Big Overhead.

"And no club in either league has such a tremendous overhead as the Yankees. No club stands to lose as much money as the Yankees. If Col. Ruppert produces a pennant winner, then he can make more than any other club in the league, but if he doesn't he is apt to lose more.

"Other clubs do not have the terrific taxes on real estate that the Yankees have—or that too-heavy pay roll, with such as Lou Gehrig getting $39,000 a year and at least three other Yankees beside DiMaggio getting $20,000. And the Yanks have four office workers and park employes for every one on the pay roll of any other club in the league.

"Why, the Yankees pay George Weiss more for managing their farm system than most other clubs give to their big league managers. The Yanks don't make money with their farm teams. It's the profits on the Yankees that pay the freight. And who is paying the salaries and traveling expenses of those ten Yankee scouts? The Yanks have got to win the pennant or they're risking an awful loss on the season.

"That's why they need DiMaggio. It took 'em only three days to find out that the Yankees without DiMaggio are not the Yankees. Panic was written all over Manager Joe McCarthy's face after those two defeats in three games in Boston. And now they expect us to believe that DiMaggio surrendered unconditionally and abjectly at a time when he had the Yankees by the neck and was making it hurt.

"Nuts!"

Leaves Post At Roanoke For Job Here

Succeeds Wiffy Cox, New Congressional Golf Club Mentor.

George Diffenbaugh, who resigned as golf professional at Indian Spring to accept a similar position at Roanoke, Va., a scant two weeks ago, is Washington-bound again, this time to accept a berth as pro at Kenwood Club.

His appointment to the position left vacant by Wiffy Cox, who resigned to accept a similar role at Congressional, was announced by Don Chamberlin, president of the Kenwood Club. He was selected from a field of 50 applicants. He will assume his new duties as soon as possible, probably early next week.

One of the outstanding club-wielders and instructors in the Middle-Atlantic territory for more than a decade, Diffenbaugh served his apprenticeship under J. Munro Hunter, at Indian Spring, and playing with him in exhibition matches compiled a record that promises to withstand the assault of many future generations.

Noted for his tremendous driving ability, Diffenbaugh won the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. tournament frequently, and added the District Open title to his string of achievements in 1935 and again in 1936. During his 10-year tenure at Indian Spring he played that club's difficult lay-out in 66, and frequently toured the course in the 60's. He hung up a record 67 at Columbia that still stands during a medal play tournament in 1934.

A native of Baltimore where he spent his youth and for a time was employed as a race-horse boy, Diffenbaugh's first golf position was at a public course. From there he went to Indian Spring. His best known pupil is Roger Peacock, former District amateur champion, who was one of his rivals for the Kenwood berth.

Diffenbaugh is one of the most popular pros on the links, and is considered an excellent instructor. Last year he served as president of the Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers Association, and has long been active in one capacity of another in the association.

Bucs Sweep Card Series

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 21.—The Pittsburgh Pirates made a clean sweep of their season opening series with the Cardinals by taking the third and final game today, 6 to 5.

The Pirates pounded Curt Davis for 12 hits in 8 innings and added 2 hits in the ninth off Guy Bush and Max Macon, to break a 4-to-4 tie. The Cards rallied in their ninth, but fell short by one run. Davis was making his first appearance in a Redbird uniform since coming here from the Cubs in the Dizzy Dean deal, but the defeat was charged to Bush.

Manager Frisch had to rearrange his line-up because of the absence of Pepper Martin, called to the bedside of a sick child.

Hubbell Defeats Bees In 1938 Debut on Hill

King Carl Strikes Out Seven, Keeps Control of Situation Throughout the Contest.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 21.—All's well with the Giants. King Carl Hubbell made his 1938 pitching debut today and was as masterful as ever in flinging the National League champions to a 3-2 win over the Boston Bees.

The Hub fanned seven, walked only three and, although having his usual trouble with Tony Cuccinello, was generally on top as he gave the Giants a 2-1 edge in their first series of the season.

Each side collected eight hits and one homer. Cuccinello performed that chore for the Bees in the fourth, and Hank Leiber landed on one of the Lefty Milt Shoffner's slants and knocked it out of the park for the Giants in the same frame. Leiber later drew credit for driving in the winning run when he was walked with the bases loaded in the fifth.

The Giants got off in front in the second frame when Mel Ott tripled and scored on Johnny McCarthy's fly. Each club scored in the fourth, on the Cuccinello and Leiber homers, and in the fifth. The Bees tallied on a walk, an infield out and Roy Johnson's single. The Giants counted on consecutive singles by Hubbell and Jojo Moore, a sacrifice, and consecutive walks to Ott (which filled the bases) and Leiber (which

Joe Savoldi Beats Indian

1,400 Fans See Italian Pin Thunderbird.

Joe Savoldi, who bounded from Notre Dame football fame to the canvas of a wrestling ring, returned to American competition last night and defeated Chief Thunderbird in the feature match at Turner's Arena. Some 1,400 fans saw the former Rambler grid ace dropkick his foe into semi-consciousness and pin him in 24 minutes.

The match was a mixture of orthodox wrestling tactics and an assortment of slam-bang roughneck business which the mat profession has adopted to entertain a new wrestling audience. Savoldi proved a capable performer in both fields of the profession.

He will probably be matched for an outdoor match with Jim Londos at Griffith Stadium this summer on the strength of his performance last night. Savoldi recently returned from a two-year world cruise which saw him compete in almost every large city on the globe.

The evening's festivities were enlivened by Walter Gray, a spectator-heckler who nightly occupies a seat in Row 2. Gray was taken out of the Arena by two policemen after he had created a near-riot in vain attempts to pick fights with four wrestlers and a like number of spectators. The police didn't bother Gray while he picked on the matmen, judging these worthies perfectly able to take care of themselves, but hustled him off when he picked on the customers.

In other events of the evening's program, Jesse James, the young Greek light-heavyweight, pinned Jose Rodriguez, of Spain, in 20 minutes with a backdrop; Chief Sanooke, the 385-pound redskin performer, won over Warren Olaguivel in 7¾ minutes with a body press; Bhu Pinder, a Hindu, defeated Tony Milano in 12½ minutes with a crotch hold and Victor Weber won over Fritz Ziegfeld in 15¾ minutes with a crotch and body slam.

Manager Crouse Gets Homer in Big 7th Inning; Rochester Weak.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 21.—The Baltimore Orioles opened their 1938 International League season today by defeating Rochester, 11 to 4, before a crowd estimated at 10,500.

Norbert Kleinke, Red Wings ace, was batted for four runs in the opening inning and forced out of the game in the seventh as State officials and Mayor Lester Rapp of Rochester looked on through a light drizzle.

Harry Matuzak hurled for the Flock and allowed only six hits. Lou Scoffic smacked a homer for the Red Wings in the opening inning, while Weintraub and Wright both blasted the ball for four bases in the Oriole half.

The Orioles sluggfested their way through their half of the seventh with seven runs. Manager Bucky Crouse hit a homer in the big inning with one man on.

Yankees Get 13 Hits But Lose to Redsox

Champions Leave 12 Stranded on Base; Marcum Goes Full Route for Boston; Donald Debuts.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 21.—The Red Sox made only three hits to the New York Yankees' thirteen today, but those three safeties coupled with obliging wildness on the part of rival pitchers, were enough to give Tom Yawkey's millionaires a 3-to-2 decision over the world champions.

Still minus any kind of consistent batting punch, the Yanks left 12 runners stranded on base, and gave little support to a classy major league debut turned in by young Atley Donald. The defeat gave the Sox the season's opening series, 3 games to 1.

Johnny Marcum went the route for the Sox, and, although he was tagged for a lot of hits, he was tight in the clutches. Only in the fifth inning, when a single, Frank Crosetti's double, a walk and George Selkirk's fly produced one run, and the ninth, when consecutive two-baggers by Red Rolfe and Selkirk scored the other, was he unable to hold the vaunted Murderers' Row.

Donald walked eight batters, and that was the cause of his downfall before he was taken out in the seventh inning. In the third, three walks, Joe Vosmik's single and Jimmy Foxx's fly, scored 2 runs, and in the seventh, a walk and Vosmik's three-bagger added the winning tally.

Tigers Beat Chisox, 9 to 3

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 21.—Detroits Tigers won their first victory of the new American League season today, defeating the Chicago White Sox, 9 to 3, behind Elden Auker's 7-hit pitching.

The Tigers, who dropped the first two games of the opening series to the White Sox, combined eight hits with passes and three errors in the last five innings for their winning total. Bill Dietrich, who pitched the major leagues' only full-length no-hit game last year, held Detroit hitless for four innings, but weakened and was batted out of action in the seventh.

Ambassador Team Loses by 54-30 Score.

The Shoreham Girls Club swimming team defeated the Ambassador lassies last night, 34 to 30, in a dual aquatic meet held in the Venetian Pool at the Shoreham Hotel.

Each team won four first places, with Ann Bono, Shoreham star, carrying off individual honors by winning the 50-yard dash, the 100-yard free style, and helping the 200-yard relay snare the top honors. Florence Farnwell all so did some nice water splashing for the Shoreham girls. Helen and Ann Arnson were best for the losers.

'Red Ruffing' Or Gomez to Go on Mound

Yanks Reeling After Loss of Series to Bosox in Boston.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

New York, April 21.—The surprising Nats, who are leading the league with only 151 more games to play, take their three-game winning streak into Yankee Stadium tomorrow

Beginning then, it will be ascertained to a great degree just how capable is this 1938 Washington Club which slapped down the Philadelphia Athletics with no difficulty whatsoever in the first three games of the season. For tomorrow and over the week-end they will be facing the team that is the 7-to-10 favorite to win the pennant.

Manager Buckey Harris has ancient Elon Hogsett, the side-arming southpaw, all dusted off and ready to perform in the opener of the three-game series with the Yankees. Hogsett is his natural choice. The veteran left-hander even during his servitude with the dismal St. Louis Browns for the past two years has been able to exercise something of a hex over the Yankee club.

Harris is pitching Hogsett on the theory that if a team can stop the two potent left-handers of the Yankee club—Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey—it can beat the Yankees. And for tomorrow's game at least, the Nats will not meet up with Joe DiMaggio who is still somewhere en route East after ending his holdout siege.

Joe May Play.

From the Coast DiMaggio declared that he would join the Yankee line-up on Saturday and thus appear in two of the three games against the Nats, but there is doubt that he will be inserted into the line-up immediately by Joe McCarthy. DiMaggio's lack of training may cause the Yankees' manager to keep him idle until he has exhibited his batting eye to the Yanks' satisfaction.

Despite the fact that he pitched on Tuesday against the Red Sox, Lefty Gomez is expected to take the mound against the Nats tomorrow. The game will open the Yankee Stadium season and a throng of at least 60,000 is anticipated despite the absence of DiMaggio.

Should Manager McCarthy abandon his plan to start Gomez against the Nats, Charley Ruffing will be his alternate choice. Ruffing was routed by the Red Sox on Monday in his first start of the season.

Simmons on Post.

If it is indeed Gomez who faces the Nats tomorrow then Bucky Harris for the first time will disturb the Washington batting order which clicked so successfully against the right-handed pitching of the Athletics.

Against a southpaw, Mel Almada will be benched and Al Simmons will be sent to the centerfield post. Buddy Myer, who apparently has regained his 1935 batting form, when he hit both left and right handers with equal facility, also may be benched. Harris is not yet ready to abandon his plan to use a reversible batting order, and Ossie Bluege may go to second base for the Nats if Gomez pitches.

Harris did not spare his players today, despite their success of the past week. The full squad held a two-hour batting session at Griffith Stadium.

Taft Wright, who will be in right-field for the Nats tomorrow, will be playing in Yankee Stadium on the day that he will see it for the first time. Wright, until he shows signs of a slump, remains a fixture in the Nats' outfield against all types of pitching. He will be shooting for the short rightfield fence in Yankee Stadium.

On Hogsett's success tomorrow will depend his status with the Nats. Originally consigned to a relief pitching role, Hogsett is being drafted for duty as a starter because of his past success in beating the Yanks. A failure tomorrow may stamp him indelibly as a relief pitcher.

Malabar, 20 to 1, was second in the mile and seventy yard test, with True Mate, 100 to 7, third.

$1,017.10 Daily Double Is Cashed by 15 at Havre de Grace Track

Walter Haight

The auctioneer's hammer thumped down on the rail on a sunny November morning at Pimlico last fall. He didn't say "Sold to the American Tobacco Co.," but "Sold to Mr. duPont for $27,000." The horse that went to duPont's Foxcatcher Farm for that figure was Dauber and the price was the highest of the sale that wrote the famous Eton Blue and Brown of the C. V. Whitney stable out of racing.

HAIGHT.

I was standing beside a veteran horseman and he said, "Dauber probably will earn his way, but I hardly believe that duPont will get his money back out of racing. That's a considerable sum to be paying for that 2-year-old. It looks like he wants to get some of the Pennant blood and probably will have Dauber in the stud in a couple of years."

Now, with the 1938 season hardly in full swing, Dauber has earned about half of his purchase price and, barring hard luck or injury, should go on to make himself a fine racing bargain. His second to Stagehand in the Santa Anita Derby was a brilliant performance by a young horse who seems of the improving type. His Maryland debut was mighty impressive. Once under way in the stretch, he made Blind Eagle and other Derby hopes appear to be statues of horses.

Tomorrow Dauber puts on the finishing touches before being shipped to Louisville for the Kentucky Derby. He marches postward in that Derby-Preakness preview, the Chesapeake, which has sent four of its winners on to triumph in the Kentucky classic. The race is for $15,000 added, $5,000 more than War Admiral collected last year when he began his run to the championship. April seems to have dished out all the bad weather in her system during the Bowie meeting and, with a fast track, this race should provide plenty of zip.

Two dozen Derby eligibles have the right to enter if their handlers so choose. However, it looks as if the field will number between eight and ten. The Bomar Stable will have to depend on Benjam if it is represented. Billmar was kicked, allegedly by Dinner Jacket, in that recent sprint and suffered a badly cut leg that seems to spell finis, as far as

Toddle On's Lip Victory Pays $15.20

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 21.—A $1,017.10 daily double and the tightest finish of the Maryland season were the high lights of racing here on the South bank of the Susquehanna river this afternoon. Fifteen happy customers stepped up to the pay off windows to be handed a big roll of bills and a dime. In the crowd of 8,000 they were the only persons to bet on the "Woolworth combination" numbers of "five and ten."

The big racing thrill of the day came in the feature event, The Sudbrook Purse, in which Toddle On, owned by Mrs. Elmer Trueman, of Washington, D. C., won by a lip over E. D. Shaffer's Evening Shadow.

It was a dog-eat-dog battle from the stretch turn to the time the camera clicked and the newspaper boys, track officials and fans could not separate them. The picture showed the tip of Toddle On's nose over the wire and that of Evening Shadow on the mark.

Toddle On is the filly Mrs. Trueman gained when she picked the sire, Bud Berger, to be bred to Grace Troxler, a mare which raced in the Trueman colors in Maryland a few years back. Toddle On was making her first start since she won the Maryland Futurity at Laurel last fall, but the majority of the customers doubted her excellent condition. However, she was trained at the Benning, D.C., track and the open winter put her in best shape.

Her scattered backers collected a $15.20 mutuel after she was clocked for the six furlongs in the splendid time of 1:12 3-5.

Paying a $28.90 mutuel, Hastings View drove to his second victory of the year in the first race. The long shot, with Maurice Peters doing the saddle work, drew out approaching the wire to win by a length margin over Frank Brooke. Third money went to Can Bloom via the camera. Hastings View moved up gradually during the early part of the mile and 70 yard test and then came with a rush nearing the finish.

Suneen, a $58.60 shot, turned in a head victory in the second race, the judges calling for a photo before making the result official. Critt, another long shot, was second and Orchids Next third in a field of eleven $2,000 juveniles trying the four and one-half furlong course. Earl Porter, who has shown excellent saddle form here, brought the first-time starter to the wire in front of the pack.

The first bluefish of the season to be caught north of Cape Hatteras was taken this week by an Ocean City boat fishing on the Jacks Pot.

Odd that any boat would be fishing there this early in April, although it does show that party boats are leaving no stone unturned to be in on the first run. It's uncommon to take a blue so far north this early even though the alewives and menhaden have already started to school, and are being taken by the trawlers in great numbers. But most extraordinary was the catching of a striped bass with the blue. What it could be doing so far offshore at anytime is more than we would even care to guess.

ACKERMAN.

Several of the Ocean City captains—James B. Whaley, Talbot Bunting and J. W. Bunting—were in Washington, laying in tackle and getting ready for the coming bluefish and white marlin season. Their plans indicate a real desire to build up this offshore fishing, which has so taken the fancy of northern anglers, and to make it easy for local parties to make their reservations during the season through Milton Gordon at the Atlas Sport Store.

* * * *

George O. Sutton will get his new Wheeler sportfisherman this coming week, and the keel has been laid at the Elco plant for the Jacpau III, the 46-foot sportfisherman Paul Townsend is having built to explore the blue marlin fishing along the 1,000-fathom curve, a fishing ground some 60-old miles offshore and on the Gulf Stream.

Jacpau III will be double planked and heavily timbered to withstand the driving of two 275-horsepower Hall Scotts that will give her a top of 33 miles and a cruising speed of 25.

To be delivered July 1 at Ocean City, this boat's cruises will be watched with intense interest, and there is little doubt in our mind that a new fishing will be developed that will in every way equal or top the white marlin grounds, discovered and developed by Faul and his brother, Jack, during the past four years.

The meeting of the Virginia conservation commissioners in Richmond on April 30 will be observed with considerable interest by sportsmen, whose hunting is accomplished in the Old Dominion. For, at the last meeting, during the absence of Commissioners Straus and Sinclair Brown, of the western counties, and Judge William S. Snow, of Alexandria, the oddest hunting season we have ever heard of was proposed.

To open on November 15 and run until December 1. From December 2 until December 27 there would be rest days every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. Then until January 2 it would again be open continuously, when the rest days would start again and continue until the close of the season.

They fortunately left an alternative season—open November 15 and close January 20. It is the consensus of opinion that the three commissioners named will see the fallacy in the proposed season and make one more in accordance with the needs of sportsmen.

The one highlight is the proposal to make all seasons open on November 15. By so doing many young turkeys killed every year by squirrel hunters will have a real chance to survive illegal hunting.

Any licensed Virginia sportsman caring to make a protest can send it to the Virginia Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs, Richmond, Va. It will be placed before the chairman of the commission at the meeting.

Bass Are Biting

Big Channel bass, weighing up to 50 pounds, are biting at Oregon Inlet in a greater number than has ever before been known.

The first blues of the season were taken there late yesterday by Chester Tillett on a feather lure. Boat reservations are available for mid-week, but none are to be had for the week-end.

Bobbie Kaufman, aged 13, journeyed by devious ways to Pimmet Run on opening day last Wednesday, and with a technique picked up watching flycasters, caught one 10-inch brown trout. "And that," says Bobbie, "was more than I saw in the creels of the two other anglers fishing this water, although there were many fish in the pools."

He also left his telephone number, in the hope that he might be able to get up another stream during the week-end, with an angler who had room in his car for a quiet, well-behaved boy.

What a swell chance for someone to lay the corner stone in the foundation of a future sportsman and conservationist but also what a responsibility would rest upon our shoulders if something happened to him on a trip we had engineered. For that reason—no phone number, Bobbie; only the hope that real soon something might turn up to give you a day astream.

Reports so far on Virginia's first day have been meager. Probably because everyone is holding off for this week-end.

Seven Bouts On Program; Time Is 8:30

Speary-Tap Fight Tops Card; Katalinas Meets Miller.

Amateur boxing moves into Turner's Arena tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Under the sponsorship of the Washington Newspaper Guild, seven bouts will comprise the program, bringing together the recent A. A. U. champions of Maryland and the District.

Headlining the card will be the bout between Willie Speary, National A. A. U. bantamweight champion, and Willie Tapp, District A. A. U. champion. Hailed by New York writers to be the best looking amateur prospect since Joe Louis, Speary, a native of Nanticoke, Pa., breezed through the National A. A. U. finals with little difficulty.

In addition to the national title, the Pennsylvania battler also claims the western Pennsylvania flyweight championship, the New York Golden Gloves title and the New York-Chicago intercity championship.

Hard at work for several weeks training for this meeting, Tapp, Golden Gloves champion and District A. A. U. king, is all set for the best battle of his amateur career. The Police Boys Club slugger experienced very little trouble in the local A. A. U. tournament, but was eliminated early in the finals in an overweight match.

Threatening to steal the play from the Tapp-Speary meeting is the bout listed in the heavyweight division which brings together Leo Katalinas, of Catholic University, and Leo Miller, District A. A. U. champion from Fort Myer. Miller surprised many at the recent A. A. U. tournament by scoring a one-round knockout over big 220-pound Don Adams, of Maryland University.

Tickets for the event are on sale at Turner's Arena and A. G. Spaulding's.

The pairings are as follows:

Willie Tapp vs. Willie Speary.
Leo Katalinas vs. Leo Miller.
Johnny Booth vs. Vito Sapenero.
Bernie Morris vs. Tony De Toto.
Bill Nolan vs. Conrad Stall.
Delton Parker vs. Harry Sunderland.
Billy Banks vs. Jimmy Montgomery.

Eastern's Track Squad Faces Undefeated Episcopal Today

A dual track meet between Eastern High and undefeated Episcopal High at Alexandria today at 3:30 p. m. will headline a sports card that will see four baseball games and a tennis match round out the high school program.

Washington-Lee's unbeaten nine will attempt to run its string of victories to seven against Fredericksburg High on the Arlington field. Friends will travel to Charlotte Hall, Md., to play the Charlotte Hall Academy team in the first of a two-game series on a home-and-home basis.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase, which defeated Landon Prep, 7-3, meets a county opponent when it engages Rockville High on the latter's home field, while at the same time Mount Rainier's heavy slugging outfit, which won a 19-4 victory over Maryland Park with a 20-hit attack, will step out of Prince Georges County to play Montgomery-Blair.

In the tennis match, Central High School's racquet wielders will attempt to stop the George Washington Frosh crew on the courts at Potomac Park. Action starts at 3 o'clock.

Lary's Double Beats Browns

Blow Gives Cleveland 4-to-3 Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, April 21.—Lyn Lary's double with the bases loaded in the eighth gave the Cleveland Indians a 4-to-3 victory over the St. Louis Browns today. Cleveland won the series, 2-1.

Earl Whitehill, 38-year-old southpaw, making his first start of the season, held the Browns to four hits in the eight innings he worked. One of the hits, however, was a seventh-inning home run by Tom Heath, St. Louis catcher. This tied the score, as the Tribe had counted only once at the expense of Vito Tamulis, stocky left-hander who started for the Browns and was recorded as the losing pitcher. Lary got his double off Julio Bonetii, Tamulis' successor, after Bonetti purposely passed Jeff Heath.

Then junior hunt teams and student jumping events take place. Finally is the intercollegiate jumping team challenge trophy competition.

Ayres Allows Two Hits as Mates Win, 8-0.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 21.—Dick Ayres, of Alexandria, twirled a 2-hit game here today and Virginia blanked Virginia Military Institute, 8 to 0, to remain undefeated in the State.

The Cavaliers collected 8 hits off Thrift and Brennaman, Cadet hurlers, which netted as many runs in two frames, but could do little with the offerings of Robinson, who twirled the last four innings.

Smokers' Test showed Vintage Tobacco was easier on your breath

WHITE OWLS are definitely easier on your breath—scientific tests proved it. And there's a good reason why, too. Every White Owl always has a Vintage-tobacco filler. Nature—not artificial factory processing—made this tobacco exceptionally mild, mellow.

We maintain a vast crop-inspection system—the only known organization of its kind—to locate Vintage tobacco. In Vintage years, we classify all filler tobacco into seven grades—and buy only tobacco of the quality of the top three for use in White Owls.

Switch to mellow White Owls today. Taste the fine flavor of Vintage tobacco. Enjoy real smoking pleasure—and applause from the ladies.

THE METALLIC NOSE KNOWS

Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten popular brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

Rookie Wins For Dodgers; Gives 9 Hits

Pressnell Scores Shutout Victory Over Phils, 9-0.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 21.—Young Forest Pressnell, fresh up from the minors, made his major league debut today by pitching the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 9 to 0 shutout over the futile Phillies.

He gave up nine hits, fanned three and walked only two, while the Brooklyns were combing Hugh Mulcahy and Harry Kelleher for 15 safeties to take the season's opening series, two games to one.

Pressnell looked particularly effective in the pinches, especially in the fourth inning, when the Phils connected for four hits and were unable to push a man across.

A two-run opening frame and a five-run splurge in the fourth skyrocketed the Dodgers way out in front. Rosy Rosen, with two doubles and a single, and Dolph Camilli and Cookie Lavagetto, each with three hits, were the batting heroes.

Myer Team Is Second; Miller Wins

D.C. Title-Holders Score; Savoy Takes Thriller From Dwojewski.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A small section of the United States Army went into action last night at Fort Myer, and from a veritable maelstrom of flying fists emerged eight new Third Corps Area ring champions.

Some 3,500 fans witnessed the program, one that produced more excitement than a cat in a canary shop, and was one of the best staged in this vicinity this season.

A trio of District A. A. U. champions, Ovid Crider, 126 pounds; Ralph (Bobo) Harris, 165 pounds, and Leo Miller, heavyweight, paced the field. Miller's victory gave the host team its third championship of the evening and helped it win second place in team scoring, but the others fought for Fort Belvoir's unplaced team.

Fort Hoyle, with a solitary individual title, but five men in the finals, clinched the team trophy by a narrow margin.

Bert Savoy Wins.

Bert Savoy, Fort Myer 155-pounder, outlasted Ben Dwojewski, of Hoyle, to win the crown in a gruelling and thrill-drenched argument that had the audience in an uproar. Utilizing his superior reach and heighth to best advantage, Savoy punched his way to a lengthy lead in the first two rounds, sending Dwojewski to the canvas twice in the second.

The stocky Pole was game to the core, however, in splendid condition, and finally connected with a right to the button in the third. Savoy toppled over on his face, took a nine-count, getting up in time to save himself from a knockout. Both lads were bringing 'em up from the floor throughout the last minute of fighting in desperate efforts for a knockout, and were so arm-weary at the end they couldn't hold up their gloves.

One untoward event marred the program. Alf Booher, Fort Myer 145-pounder, took the title from rugged and hard-hitting Tony Barale, of Fort Meade, on a foul in the second round. Booher hit his opponent with everything but the referee's watchfob in the first, sending him to the deck twice. Each time, however, Barale bounded up without a count, and Booher seemed to lose heart.

Booher is Floored.

Barale shifted from the catching to the pitching end in round two, and buckled Booher's wobbly knees with a brace of punishing right hands to the brisket. He smacked him soundly with another right to the head, then drove one to the body. From the press bench it appeared to be an fair anatomy, but Booher dropped to the canvas, writhing in agony. Referee Denny Hughes counted him out—then led him to his corner and awarded him the bout on a foul.

Crider opened the championship portion of the program by outpointing Ted Frew, of Fort Hoyle. Eddie Walck, Hoyle lightweight, took the second belt by flooring Sam Tamalunas, of Langley Field, three times in the second round to win a clean cut and unanimous verdict.

Harris experienced difficulty solving Bill Tolbert's arms-and-elbows defense in their middleweight engagement, but succeeded often enough to get the decision from the Fort Monroe man.

The light-heavyweight crown fell to Tiller, "The Toiler," of Fort Meade, whose southpaw slugging was just a little too much for earnest and industrious Bob Bajer, of Hoyle.

Miller cut down John Topolski, of Hoyle, to his size, and boxed his ears for him in the second and third rounds—despite a gory gash on the right eye-lid, to win the heavyweight diadem.

Derby Workouts.

Louisville, Ky., April 21 (AP).—Mrs. Payne Whitney's Gangplank, prepping for the Kentucky Derby, covered a mile very handily in 1:42 2-5 at Churchill Downs today. The bay colt, by Dis Donc-Conge, was clocked in 24 4-5, 50 1-5 and 1:16 3-5 at the quarter posts.

Despite bright sunshine and cool weather today, after a cloudy day of April showers, few Derby eligibles appeared on the historic track. Lawrin, H. M. Woolf's bay colt by Insco-Marg. Lawrence, was sent over the mile, but continued to display reluctance to morning workouts that some thoroughbreds have. He was clocked in 24, 49 4-5 and 1:16 2-5 at the quarters, satisfactorily enough, but slowed down and ended the mile in 1:44 2-5.

The Big Guns Roar at Fort Myer—and Somebody Nears the Canvas

Joey Puig and Jerry La Bella Signed for Arena's Semifinal

Ahern Comes Through With a Good Bout to Support Pacho-Arcelli Feature on Next Fight Card.

A couple of busy bantamweights, Joey Puig and Jerry La Bella, will buzz around the Arena ring Monday night in a six-round semi-windup to the featured Bobby Pacho—Werther Arcelli bout.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn was as pleased as a new papa after making the match, and was not far wrong in calling it one of his best efforts in the quarrel-picking role. It will rival the main go for color and excitement.

Puig won the New York Golden Gloves championship two years ago, and since turning professional has compiled a fat batting average. He won 16 consecutive fights before bowing to Jackie Jurich, American champion, in a close 10-round fracas. It was so close they were re-matched and Jurich won again, but by an even narrower margin. The verdict was hotly disputed in newspapers.

La Bella, an Italian with a fiery temperament, won the New England A. A. U title two years ago at the same time his prospective opponent was campaigning in Gotham. They never met as amateurs, although La Bella, a pretty fair fighter in any league, was hot after a bout with his rival. This will be their first engagement, and it will be for blood.

Joey Archibald, Providence will-o'-the-wisp walloper, may meet the winner in an outdoor joust. At least both contestants have been promised a shot at Jarring Joey—if they win.

The matchmaker also has been lavish in promissory notes with Pacho and Arcelli, who are working on the theory that the winner will get a match with either Saverio Turiello or Milt Aron, of Chicago. Pacho also has a hankering to rub out an unexpected defeat splashed on his record a few weeks back by Arcelli at the St. Nicholas Arena, New York, in a ten-round debate.

Taking the bout at the eleventh hour on a substitute basis and with little or no preparation, Arcelli banged his way to a clean-cut verdict over the amazed Mexican before 5,200 fans who were as startled as the loser. Pacho was the odd-on favorite, quoted as high as 10-1 in some quarters, hence his defeat was not only a blow to his vanity but to several hundred members of the sporting gentry.

Pacho, it is reported, turned down an offer of $750 to box Turiello in Baltimore last week in order to accept this scrap with Arcelli for a much smaller figure. Arcelli at first was loath to sign for the bout in Washington, but took it on second thought, figuring that a neutral battle-ground would be the safest. He is well prepared for this meeting, incidentally, having pounded out decisions over Jimmy Marsh and Tommy Jones in the last three weeks.

One of three preliminary bouts to be presented was closed out yesterday when Tommy Hoover and Charley Gilley were signed for a four-rounder. They are lightweights.

Reds Score 6-2 Victory

Cincinnati, April 21 (AP).—Paul Derringer limited Chicago to four hits today while his mates garnered 13 off of Tex Carleton to win, 6 to 2, for the Cincinnati Reds' first victory of the season.

It was the Cubs' initial setback, after two straight triumphs, one credited to Dizzy Dean.

In the fourth inning, Derringer hurled only four balls to retire the side. Carleton was hit in every inning.

Homers marked scoring for each side in the third. O'Dea connected to score behind Lazzeri, who had walked to open the frame, and Goodman, first man up in the Reds' half, clouted another.

In the seventh, the Reds filled the bases on Riggs' single, Cooke's double and a deliberate walk to Craft. Successive singles by McCormick and Lombardi brought three runs across.

Leslie Is Victor In College Golf

Athens, Ga., April 21 (AP).—Through a drizzling rain that drenched the battleground, Paul Leslie, 22-year-old Louisiana State University captain, breezed to a convincing triumph today in the qualifying round of the Fourth Annual Southern Intercollegiate Golf Tournament.

The young shotmaker, a native of Missouri, negotiated the 36-hole championship test in 143 strokes, three under par and six blows in front of his nearest competitor, Gar Miller, of Duke University.

Big Entry in Field Trials

The seventeenth running of the Members' Spring Trials of the National Capital Field Trial Club will get under way at 8 o'clock this morning and continue through tomorrow, the twenty-third.

Host htis year, as usual, is Walter Johnson who, through the many seasons of his baseball career never lost his interest in dogs, and the running of them, whether after the wily fox, in the field, or at trials.

His 555-acre farm at Germantown, Md., will probably see a greater gathering this week than for many years past.

The judges are two outstanding men of the field trial world, United States Senator William H. Smathers, of Atlantic City, N. J., and Dr. E. K. Tingley, of Marietta, Ohio.

They will judge three stakes. First, the Derby, for puppies whelped after January 1, 1937; second, the All Age, for winners or non-winners; third, the Shooting Dog, for non-field trial winners of other than shooting dog stakes.

There will be three trophies for each stake.

Belle Haven Tryouts Set

the Derby hopes of this colt are concerned, Mrs. Emil Denemark has Blind Eagle and Dorothy Rock ready. The former could not handle Dauber in their recent meeting, run over a slow track. He might be better suited by a fast strip.

William Elder may provide a big upset with Walkaway. This colt has worked like the wind over at Pimlico and promises to race accordingly. Crepe and Mythical King, representing B. F. Whitaker. The real battle, it is believed, will be between Dauber and Sun Egret. The A. C. Compton colt has worked excellently since slightly cutting his leg in the Harford Handicap. Sun Egret, winner of two Bowie stakes, finished a scant half-length behind Stagehand and Dauber in the Santa Anita Derby and is definitely improved now. Of course, mud would enhance his chances.

Received a letter yesterday from Al Boyle, genial president-general manager of the Charles Town track. He says that the programs at the popular West Virginia course will start at 2:15 each day of the 36-day meeting beginning on May 16. As Charles Town allows only 20 minutes between races, the majority of cards should be completed by 5 o'clock, allowing an early get-away for those coming from a distance.

Bill Bennings' friend, "Pork Chops," should be in his glory at Charles Town. "Poke," as he calls himself, although his real name is Robert Meredith, will be with the John T. Harris stable, of Fredericksburg, Va., which is bringing a large string to the mountains this year. Timber Lady, Lady Cirek, Bluey, Roan Canopy and Five O'Four are among the charges that "Pork Chops" and his friends are getting ready for action.

Jockeys, horsemen and newspapermen can't understand the action of Jockey Charley Kurtsinger in disobeying his contract holder and riding Menow last Saturday instead of reporting to New York. Kurtsinger has a record that places him high in the esteem of the turf. While he has been set down for rough riding, which is no more than trying too hard to win, he has always conducted himself well both in and out of the saddle. A professional, but a gentleman, if there ever was one. There must have been a mistake. Anyway, we're all pulling for him to get back in action.

Hoyas Meet Penn State Here Today

Petroskey Is Selected to Face Lions at 3 o'Clock.

By Jack Munhall.

Tuning up for its traditional clash with Maryland, at College Park tomorrow, Georgetown University's undefeated nine will attempt to make Penn State its nineteenth straight victim this afternoon on the Hoya field. Game time is 3 o'clock.

With Mike Petroskey on the mound, Joe Judge will present a slightly revamped line-up which he calculates will supply real batting power, sadly lacking in Georgetown's victories over Vermont and Michigan.

Joe Mellendeck, strong-armed sophomore football sensation, will be the lone newcomer, replacing Tommy Keating at shortstop. Keating, troubled all season with a sore arm, will move over to second base where the peg to first is much shorter. By this change Joe Moran, a weak hitter but a clever fielder, is relegated to the bench.

The selection of Petroskey to pitch against the Nittany Lion means that Hank Bertrand will get the nod against the Terps. Bertrand, also a basketball star, has shown plenty of stuff lately and rates the Terp assignment, although Petroskey beat the Old Liners twice last season.

Although Maryland's recent string of losses has made any comparison between it and Georgetown out of place, the Penn State game will offer another basis on which to judge the local rivals. The Terps, in one of their most impressive performances, twisted the Lion's tail in a well-played 7-4 game at College Park last week.

Georgetown's predominantly right-handed batting array will view with pleasure the appearance of Penn State's pitching nomination, Captain Ben Simoncelli. Simoncelli, a southpaw, won six games last season but bore the brunt of a 13-hit attack when Maryland defeated the Nittany.

Penn State's hitting star is a lad well remembered for his basketball efforts against the Hoyas last winter. He is Sol Niehoff, leftfielder, who paced the Lions in two victories over the Hoya five, scoring 17 and 10 points, respectively.

5 Winners Picked By Bill Bennings

Five winners on the seven-race program at Havre de Grace yesterday were selected by Bill Bennings, The Post's handicapper. He started the day right by picking Hastings View, a $28.90 shot, in the first race. His second race selection also ran, but he came back in the third with Happy Code, $5.30 and followed that with Toddle On, $15.20, after Little Sally his first pick was scratched. In the fifth, New Deal won for him at $4, while in the sixth, his second horse, High Tension led his first horse, American Belle, to the wire. Bill put over Flagstone in the last event at $4.80.

Bill, who sings the blues and chants, "Two-a-day-will-keep-the-boss-away, really has been averaging about three winners daily since the Maryland season opened.

Bill Bennings selections are available only in The Post.

Senators Deny They Will Yield On Profits Levy

Conferees Face Prolonged Deadlock Over Taxes; Meet Again Today.

Senate tax conferees yesterday denied any "break" in their unrelenting stand for complete repeal of the undivided profits tax, as the Congressional conference committee prepared to resume conferences today.

Deadlocked for seven days on conflicting profits and gains tax provisions of the House and Senate bills, the Congressional conference committee headed into another almost certain stalemate today.

Unless concessions are agreed to by House tax managers on resubmission of controversial provisions to both houses, one Senate tax spokesman said today's session is likely to be brief.

Heartened by the Senate unemployment and relief committee's report recommending prompt repeal of the undivided profits tax and modification of the capital gains levy, Senate conferees generally scouted reports of "Senate yielding."

Backed by President Roosevelt's letter favoring the House undivided profits tax principle and graduated capital gains levies, House managers were no less adamant.

House conferees consistently have refused to take the profits tax back to the House for another vote, and Senate conferees are urging that they do so. After expiration of 20 days without any agreement, it will be possible for any member of the House to move from the floor to instruct conferees, under House rules. Such an independent move would be possible after May 4, as the bill was sent to conference April 14, it was pointed out yesterday.

House Test Possible.

Under the little used rule, any House foe of the undivided profits tax after May 4 could move to instruct the House Conference Committee to recede from the profits tax and accept the Senate flat tax arrangements. Speculation was divided on whether the House in such a test would back its own committee and the President, or side with the Senate bill.

While tax conferees locked horns on the new revenue law, two other tax developments claimed Capitol attention.

The Senate lobby investigating committee, headed by Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), Indiana, obtained permission of the Treasury and the President to examine income, excess profits and capital stock tax returns.

Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), of New York, a member of the House Judiciary Committee, declared for the Constitutional amendment method of reciprocal action by State and Federal governments to reach tax-exempt securities and officials, salaries. Celler took exception to the President's proposal to remove exemptions by legislation, and quoted Treasury officials as favoring the amendment method.

Questioned last night on Lobby Committee scrutiny of Treasury tax returns, Senator Minton said the committee is looking into a "propaganda matter" but declined to reveal its nature.

He said investigators are seeking data on tax returns of officials of "a certain organization which has never been before our committee before."

Minton denied the inquiry touched on the recent campaign against the defeated reorganization bill and said neither Frank Gannett, Rochester publisher, nor his committee to uphold constitutional government, were involved. He said he wouldn't name the organization being investigated "because nothing may come of it."

An executive order signed by the President April 18 "ordered that income, excess profits and capital stock tax returns * * * shall be open to inspection by the special committee to investigate lobbying activities, United States Senate." A Treasury order to collectors of internal revenue, to make necessary information available followed.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

The slams that are hardest to reach in the bidding are those that can be made because of a perfect "fit" rather than because of honor trick preponderance. Take the North-South hands in the deal recorded below, for instance. On paper it would not appear that there should be any difficulty in reaching the obviously correct six club contract. Yet in a recent seven table duplicate game in which the players were at least average, only one North-South pair reached the slam.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ K 10 8 5 2 ♡ — ◇ A J 10 7 ♣ A 8 5 4
♠ 9 6 4 3 ♡ K 8 5 2 ◇ K Q 6 3 ♣ 7	West / North / East / South	♠ Q 7 ♡ A 10 6 4 3 ◇ 9 4 2 ♣ Q J 3
	♠ A J ♡ Q J 9 7 ◇ 8 5 ♣ K 10 9 6 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 N T	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
6 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

After South's original pass, North did not view his own hand with any great enthusiasm. He had only 2½-plus honor tricks and, even when South responded with the "fitting" bid of two clubs, North could hardly get slam minded. As a matter of fact, during the early stages of bidding, North could not quite decide what the best final contract would be insofar as a suit or no-trump was concerned. Due to the match-point scoring, he was rather inclined toward permitting the three notrump bid to stand and only with grave doubts did he insist on the minor suit contract. At no time did North feel justified in making a strong slam try via the four-five notrump convention; instead, he attempted to describe his distribution accurately and leave further decision to South. The latter naturally favored notrump strongly, and it was only after North's jump bid to five clubs that South could form a slam picture. Even after arriving at the slam, there was still work to be done in fulfilling it, due to the failure of the trump suit to break.

West opened the diamond king. The ace won, a low club was led to the king, and a club returned to the ace. Now that it was apparent that a trump trick must be lost, declarer saw that it would not be enough to establish North's spade suit by ruffing because this would leave South only two trumps with which to take care of North's three diamonds. The only chance then was to bring home the spade suit without loss and this, of course, involved a winning finesse against the queen. Luckily for declarer, he guessed this two-way finesse correctly. He led a low spade from dummy and played his own jack, then cashed the ace. The queen dropping from East, it was all over. A heart was ruffed and the spade king cashed. East hastily ruffed it with the high trump, but declarer was able to discard his losing diamond and the rest of the tricks were then cold.

3 Night Clubs Rendezvous For Summer

Boulevard Farms, Spanish Garden Ballroom, Blue Grotto New Spots.

By Chanticleer

Harbinger of summer for those who are pleasure wise is the opening of three new clubs designed to give relief at the change of the season.

Boulevard Farms, opening tomorrow night under the management of C. W. Kennedy, has cool surroundings where you can enjoy your favorite thirst-quenching beverages. Every night, Howard Pyle and his Columbia broadcasting orchestra are scheduled, and Evelyn Knight is the starring vocalist.

The Spanish Garden Ballroom opened at Glen Echo Park this week. The dancers are being entertained by the antics of little Joe Hart and provided with swing music by Joe and his band. Joe has inaugurated the season of traveling name bands that will appear weekly. Next week's attraction will be Ralph Webster and his N. B. C. orchestra. Joyne Denton, Russ Bodine, Bill Cavanaugh and Tiny Hardesty, with the electric piano, and the Royal Flush of Swing are featured.

In an atmosphere of blue, cream and green, indirect lighting and glass brick, the new Blue Grotto opened at Fourteenth street and the Avenue Tuesday. It brings Washington the intimacy of a London after-theater club. Evelyn Tyner, who was at the New York Rainbow Room for two years, is at the piano. She accompanies Talbot Gassett, who graduated from local popularity to vocal prominence on Loew's circuit.

Another cheerful thought for those weather conscious is the ice show at the Shoreham May 2. This week, dinner patrons are talking about Enters and Borgia, exotic dance team, at the Blue Room. Henry Nestor, formerly known as Washington's singing cop, is lulling listeners with sentimental ballads.

The Metronome Room of the Wardman Park Hotel is a favorite spot for visiting members of the D. A. R. They also have discovered the King Jesters at the Carlton's Shar-Zad Room, where Mary Ruth Milan reigns as queen.

The Pall Mall Room of the Raleigh announces a change in policy. Beginning Monday, there will be no more cover charge, only a minimum charge of a dollar on weekdays and a dollar and a half Saturdays. The special Wednesday night programs will be continued. The style-conscious miss will want to go for Tuesday lunch. Local debutantes will model dresses for the fashion-show luncheon.

The Lotus is proud of the Broadway Show Girl Chorus, which has attracted considerable comment on a dancing-doll number. Dick and Dotty Jones introduce dance numbers, and Roy, Rita and Roule feature a trio waltz.

The Hi Hat is featuring two new summer drinks for tired hot patrons. They are a Hawaiian cooler and a frozen Hi-Hat cocktail. The String Swingsters, Libby Frazier and Hill Billy Dick Reger continue with entertainment.

The Russian Troika is one of the more colorful Washington clubs. The atmosphere, food and floor show are unsurpassed, and visitors have discovered this as a "must" on the list of Washington attractions.

The Bamboo Gardens is now a meeting place for friends of that popular emcee, Leo Lisee.

Entertain at Capital Night Spots

Government Loses Virginia DamFight

Roanoke, Va., April 21 (AP).—Holding, among other things, that the stream is not navigable and that construction and operation of the defendant's power project would not interfere with navigation on the Kanawha River, Judge John Paul, in the United States District Court, today denied the petition of the Federal Government for an injunction to restrain the Appalachian Electric Power Co. from proceeding with a hydro-electric project on New River, just above Radford.

Judge Paul's opinion came nearly two years after start of the hearing. The defendant, whose hydro-electric project was begun about June 1, 1934, filed with the Federal Power Commission in 1926 a declaration of intention to construct the dam at Radford. The commission held that operation of such a plant would so affect the flow of water in the Kanawha River as to interfere with navigation.

Kansas Crop Estimate Nips Wheat Rally

Private Forecasts Exceed Federal Figure by 11,000,000 Bushels.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 21.—Authoritative unofficial estimates excelling by 11,000,000 bushels the Government's April 1 Kansas harvest forecast did much today to cancel brisk wheat price gains here.

At first, a buying rush associated with nervousness over drought damage in Italy and with overnight export purchases of 500,000 bushels from North America hoisted values 1⅞ cents. On the upturn, however, offerings increased, bidding dwindled fast, and setbacks carried the market to fractionally below yesterday's latest figures. Late indications of a pronounced pause in European demand were a handicap.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅜ lower to ⅛ higher compared with yesterday's finish; May, 84⅛@84¼; July, 82@82⅛. Corn unchanged to ⅜ off; May, 59½@59⅝; July, 61⅛@61¼. Oats unchanged to ⅛ up. Rye showing ⅜-2 cents drop, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents advance.

Lamont Lauds Credit Steps

New York, April 21 (AP).—Thomas W. Lamont, a partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., returning from a European trip on the liner Brenen today, said he was "favorably impressed" with the timeliness of the Administration's recent action in de-sterilizing gold and lowering the Federal Reserve requirements.

"Any steps toward making credit even more abundant serves to counteract a deflationary credit policy," he said. "I was favorably impressed with the idea that the proposals lowering the Federal Reserve requirements and de-sterilizing gold came at the right moment."

Questioned about the industrial outlook abroad, he said:

"I was in Paris during the recent crisis in the French government and people were not talking about the industrial outlook but were interested in getting a strong government, and I think they have one"—referring to the government of Daladier.

The banker said that Joseph P. Kennedy, the new Ambassador to the Court of St. James's "has made a great hit in London. He talks right from the shoulder, and they appreciate it."

Treasury Sells Bonds to Check Jump in Prices

$108,000,000 Sold to Offset Bond Market Reaction to Expanded Credit.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board disclosed yesterday that it sold $108,000,000 worth of Treasury bonds last week to prevent a too rapid rise in the Government bond market following the announcement of President Roosevelt's credit expansion and spending program.

The policy of the Federal Reserve Board has been to prevent undue fluctuations either downward or upward in Federal bond prices in order to discourage speculation in these securities.

The board replenished its investment portfolio, however, by buying $19,000,000 worth of Treasury notes and $89,000,000 worth of Treasury bills.

Excess reserves—the idle and lendable cash of the Nation's banks increased $730,000,000 to $2,490,000,000 during the week as the result of an eighth reduction by the board in the percentages of deposits which banks are required to hold as reserves for the protection of depositors. Excess reserves are expected to increase further as the Treasury spends the $1,400,000,000 credit it received by desterilization of gold.

Farm Commodities Take Upward Turn

Wholesale prices of agriculture commodities largely accounted for an advance of .1 per cent in the composite index of wholesale commodity prices during the week ended April 16, Commissioner Isador Lubin, of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, announced yesterday.

"The advance represents the first upward tendency in the past six weeks," Lubin said, "and it brought the all-commodity index to 78.6 per cent of the 1926 average. The combined index is now 1.1 per cent below the corresponding week of March and 10.3 per cent below the level of a year ago."

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Utility Stocks Improve in Dull and Irregular Market; Treasury Bonds Strong.

New York, April 21.—While United States Government bonds responded to the quirt of official action, the share market continued to lag in the uncertainty over whether business is going to get better or worse. Fractionally higher prices for utilities and irregularity in other divisions marked a rather dull day's trading. Last prices for stocks were around the best. Sales volume was around 600,000 shares. May wheat closed an eighth of a cent higher at 84⅛ cents a bushel.

Although stocks were irregularly higher, there was no great enthusiasm in any direction. Airplanes, which recently have appealed to speculators, had to undergo profit-taking on the stock exchange and on the curb. Steels continued rather shaky on the bearish reports from the trade on the immediate outlook. United States Steel preferred, which comes up for dividend action next week, dropped below par. Rails were a shade firmer.

Most of the price gains which reached beyond the fractional stage were among preferred stocks, although a number of preferred stocks dropped 1 to 2 points. Universal Leaf Tobacco, American, Rolling Mill, United Corporation, Laclede Gas, Pittsburgh Coke, Radio, Commonwealth & Southern and American Power & Light were among the preferred stocks to advance 1 to 5 points. The market's tendency to look more favorably upon public utility issues was based less upon any hope of immediate relief from the offer of a billion of Government money than upon the gamble that the lending concession might prove to be the opener for a real retreat by the Administration on its utility policy.

Commodities Harden.

In commodities the tone was a little firmer. Some interest was shown in the Bureau of Labor Statistics wholesale commodity price index for this week. The advance (one-tenth of 1 per cent) was the first in six weeks.

Financial markets showed the most excitement in a department which usually is the dullest, namely, in United States Government bonds. Persistent reports that the Treasury intended to employ sterilized gold for the retirement of Government obligations caused the banks to rush into the market in anticipation of the harder prices which it was supposed would take place with a reduction in the supply. If the outstanding bonds are cut into with the use of the inactive gold fund at a time when the money market is being eased by the huge additions to bank excess reserves, a lowering of yields would be the natural response—unless and until fresh Treasury borrowings should take up the slack and more.

Government obligations rose as much as half a point.

It is still uncertain how far Congress may be willing to go in providing fresh appropriations for the pump-priming scheme so dear to President Roosevelt, his son, James; his Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, his chairman of the Federal Reserve Board Eccles and, although grudgingly, be it said in extenuation of the offense, his Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. It is also not a foregone conclusion that the Treasury will prefer to use the gold to retire Federal obligations. The scheme is said to be opposed by most of the Federal Reserve authorities. Possibly a compromise might be worked out.

New Deal Economics.

Two well-known economists are now on record in favor of President Roosevelt's fresh spending policy as a means of ending the severe business depression, which it will be recalled, got under way in the midst of the heaviest spending this or any other three countries put together ever had known. Secretary Wallace put in his word a day or two ago. Last night James Roosevelt concurred, saying that the way to balance the budget was to spend (for the budget is now topheavy with savings), and that "experience shows national income sags if public works slow up"—just as it did presumably in 1928.

Wallie and Jimmie have discovered that if the Government pays large sums to about 25 per cent of its citizens the "national income" will rise to that extent, but they probably haven't yet discovered that all the money is being taken from somebody else's income, in the form of taxes, or that it is an actual drain on capital. Their economic reasoning is about as useful and as naive as a native's calculation of the size of Texas rivers, which he obtains from a bank to bank measurement, as indifferent as a horned toad to the fact that water flows between the banks only once every four years.

Utility Loans.

The Government now proposes to lend a billion to the public utilities for the purchase of equipment. That sudden friendliness for the public utilities shows clearly enough that President Roosevelt is aware of the results of his utility hazing program and of the part a confident utility industry would play in promoting better times. The successful offering today of the $60,000,000 of Consolidated Edison notes shows that the utility companies can find the money through regular investment channels. They do not need Government loans, except in cases where they are under a threat of extinction. Consolidated Edison, being an intrastate company, apparently is in no danger of receiving the death penalty provided for many utility holding companies, nor is there any likelihood of early competition from municipally owned plants set up with Federal financial aid. Those being the conditions, investment money is anxious to go into the concern on a low yield basis.

Cons. Edison Bonds Quoted at a Premium

New York, April 21 (AP).—Heavily supplied with idle funds as result of credit-expansion steps taken last week by Federal authorities, banks throughout the country were reported today to have been substantial buyers of the newly-offered $60,000,000 issue of Consolidated Edison Co., of New York, 3½ per cent bonds. Insurance companies and other large investment institutions also bought freely. Soon after the formal offering, 102 was bid compared with the advertised offering price of 101¾. Proceeds will be used to refund 4½ per cent bonds of the Consolidated Gas Co., of New York, the predecessor company.

Building Group Loans 3 Billion In Three Years

About a Third of U. S. League Total Is for Long-Term Financing.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A review of three years' home lending by privately operated institutions which comes close in volume to the $3,092,000,000 disbursed by the Home Owners Loan Corporation in the same period, is reported by the United States Building and Loan League, which tells how its associations disbursed $3,057,000,000 during the three years ended January 1, 1938.

Edward C. Baltz, of this city, president of the league, explains that nearly $1,039,000,000 of the total was new long term financing, which element is most important in assisting business recovery. This sum, disbursed by associations for newly built homes and for modernization and repairs of existing ones, thus represented new credit expansion. All association loans are written on a long term basis.

How much of a refunding of existing mortgage obligations has been done by the thrift and home financing institutions in these years is also indicated by Mr. Baltz. Nearly $1,700,000,000 has been disbursed for two purposes—refinancing of mortgages for borrowers who had formerly been obligated to some other lender and the lending of money to persons buying homes who wish to make mortgage arrangements different from those which were on the property at the time of sale. Thus, institutions of this type took over more than half as much of the existing mortgage debt of the country during the past three years of activity as was taken over by the Government's relief agency, the Home Owners Loan Corporation, during its active lending period, he reminds.

HOLC Demand.

"The Home Owners' Loan Corporation had a specific sum of money to lend, a certain period of time in which to lend it and a demand nearly knocking its doors down," says Mr. Baltz. "On the other hand, the savings and loan institutions have had to go out and drum up the demand for their loans in thousands of communities and they have never been under pressure to lend any specific amount.

"In spite of these differences of circumstances the privately run institutions showed enough vigor and public spirit to go out and do their part in recovery in volume as large as the emergency help rendered by the Government corporation. They, furthermore, had the task of raising most of the funds which they used from the general public in the form of investment, whereas the HOLC had no such problem.

"The comparison is not intended to imply that HOLC lagged in activity or did less than its duty but rather to point out what can also be accomplished by privately run organizations devoting their entire activities to home financing. After all, the only two types of institutions which the country has ever had specializing in home loans are the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and the savings and loan institutions."

Shell Union Head Warns Oil Industry

New York, April 21 (AP).—R. G. A. Van Der Woude, president of the Shell Union Oil Co., addressing the annual meeting of stockholders today, warned the oil industry to bring gasoline stocks down to more normal levels.

"In view of present business conditions," Van Der Woude said, "the industry would be well advised to make its estimates on a more conservative basis. A revision upward could always easily be made at a later date, once actual conditions justify it."

Easter Sales Lift Clearings In Past Week

But Total for 22 Cities Is 18.6 Per Cent Under Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 21.—Aided, to some extent, by pre-Easter holiday buying, volume of bank clearings during the latest week went about 15 per cent over the total for the week preceding. This substantial increase shortened the length of the twenty-third successive weekly drop in the year-to-year comparison.

Clearings for 22 leading cities of the United States for the week ended Wednesday, April 20, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., totaled $4,759,234,000, which made the decline 18.6 per cent from the $5,849,518,000 for the corresponding 1937 week. This compared with a difference of 29.2 per cent in the spread for the week previous.

Volume at New York rose to $2,866,381,000, but from the $3,462,883,000 last year there was a shrinkage of 17.2 per cent. Turnovers for 21 cities outside of New York advanced to $1,892,853,000, but still was 20.7 per cent smaller than the $2,386,635,000 for the comparative 1937 week.

Clearings for the current period increased $628,807,000 from the total for the week preceding.

Slump 'Very Serious,' Says Nat'l Lead's Head

Jersey City, N. J., April 21 (AP).—Edward J. Cornish, chairman of National Lead Co., told stockholders at the annual meeting today: "We are in the midst of a very serious depression, the most serious that I have ever known." Business of the company is off at least 30 per cent compared to a year ago, he said.

"I am today," he added, "perhaps the poorest representative of business in the United States, because I have been educated to the theory that if I buy anything I buy to make a profit, but that today is considered wrong. If I make a profit, the Government takes two-thirds of it. In these years of increased taxes I have sold everything in which I could take a loss. Today I cannot sell anything and the result is I do nothing."

U. S. Chemical Exports Reach Seven-Year Top

Higher Prices, Lower Tariffs and Arms Are Chief Factors.

Dallas, Tex., April 21.—The Nation's export trade in chemicals during 1937 reached the highest point in seven years, according to a report of a survey made public by the American Chemical Society, which is holding its ninety-fifth meeting here. Chemical imports of the United States in 1937 were the highest since 1930.

"Higher prices, the increased pace of the world rearmament, lower tariff barriers through reciprocal trade treaties, greater business activity during the first seven months of 1937 and the 1936 drought were major factors contributing to the increase of both the Nation's chemical foreign trade and its general foreign trade," says the report, prepared by Otto Wilson, Washington, D. C., statistician.

The increase in the Nation's foreign trade was an important factor in recording a rise of $1,500,000,000 over 1936 in total foreign trade carried on by the United States.

"Chemical foreign trade followed that of the general trade in taking a big stride forward, although imports showed a much greater proportional gain than exports. This is a reversal of the trend for several years past. The actual gain in total value was about the same for both branches of the trade, chemical imports registering an increase of $22,596,000 and exports $22,545,000. The combined value of imports and exports was greater in 1937 than for any previous year since 1929."

Fertilizers and materials recorded the outstanding foreign-trade gain with imports increasing 40 per cent over 1936. Sales of such commodities abroad fell off slightly, this group being the only one of the large groups of chemical commodities to register a decrease, either in exports or imports.

To Children's Home Bride, 12, Is Taken From Her Kitchen

Lewes, Del., April 21 (AP).—State police tonight took 12-year-old Almira Mae McChesney from the dinner she cooked and the 37-year-old husband she protested she loves.

The girl, whose marriage April 13 was discovered when truant officers investigated her absence from the fifth grade of school at Rehoboth Beach—Atlantic shore resort town—was taken to the Wilmington Detention Home.

High Court Action Amazes FPC Head

By the Associated Press.

Acting Chairman Clyde L. Seavey had "expressed astonishment" at Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts' "action" in the Metropolitan Edison Co. case, the Federal Power Commission said in a statement to the press yesterday.

The justice granted the Associated Gas & Electric Co. ten additional days in which to answer the commission's request for a Supreme Court review of the case involving the Commission's right to investigate contracts between Pennsylvania subsidiaries of the Associated System and Affiliated Hopson Service Companies.

Commission attorneys said the extension of time, granted by Roberts yesterday, virtually assured that the Supreme Court would not decide the case until next December, or possibly later because the court usually recesses next month. The commission had asked action at this term.

The Evening Star To Acquire WMAL

Officials said the case would come before the commission again if an application is later filed for transfer of the license from N. B. C. to the newspaper.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes told a press conference yesterday that "some quarters" had been "putting the heat" on him to conclude a contract with German Zeppelin interests for American helium, but that he was hesitant to make the sale without guarantees it would not be used "as an instrument of war."

The Secretary did not name the "quarters" which were applying the "heat," but he assured questioners he was not quarreling with the State Department. The latter has approved a license for the export of the gas from the United States monopoly in Texas.

Ex-Convict Sought For Giving False Tip on Robbery

A man who has served ten years in San Quentin for larceny was sought by police here last night as the stranger who gave them a false "tip" on a safecracking, collected a small sum for his "helpfulness," then vanished.

Capt. Ira Keck said the "informer" appeared at headquarters and told a story about a robbery which was to take place in a jewelry store in the 900 block of F street northwest shortly after midnight Monday.

The police spent several evenings there, but nothing happened.

120 Million Sought For Army Housing

Army posts in the District, Maryland and Virginia would be allotted more than $8,000,000 from a $120,000,000 appropriation which Chairman May of the military affairs committee yesterday told the House he would seek for Army housing projects.

May said he would ask hearings before the appropriations committee in an effort to earmark that sum for military buildings out of the $450,000,000 sought for the PWA by President Roosevelt.

"In the United States Army today," he said, "are worse housing conditions than exist in the worst slums of our cities."

War Department officials said proposed expenditures included: Bolling Field, $1,066,000; Fort Myer, $414,245; Fort Belvoir, $1,506,300; Langley Field, $440,000; Fort Meade, $963,000, and Fort Hoyle, Md., $1,531,600.

King Carol Orders Fascists to Prison

Bucharest, April 21 (U.P.).—King Carol's dictatorship throttled all effective opposition tonight by decrees to stamp out completely the Fascist iron guard.

Concentration camps for suspected enemies of the state and replacement of civil officials by army officers were authorized. All iron guard property was confiscated.

The severe measures followed a nation-wide "purge" of iron guards last week in which more than 2,000 were arrested.

James Roosevelt Colonelcy Called Relief of Idleness

By the Associated Press.

The House heard the commission of James Roosevelt, son of the President, as a colonel in the Marine Corps described yesterday as an unemployment relief measure.

During a Republican attack on the President's new spending program, Representative Knutson (Republican), Minnesota, said:

"I've noticed a tendency on the part of the Administration to use the Marine Corps to relieve unemployment."

"That's true," replied Representative Taber (Republican), New York, "but just in a family way."

Bob Burns Says—

I never could see that the younger generation today is so different from that of yesterday. Some lady writer says that their outlook on life is different. I don't think it's near as different as the world they look out on. If some of our ancestors could come back to life they would find that the world has changed a lot more than the children.

Grandpa Snazzy says that the main difference in the children is on account of this new type of architecture we have today. When I asked him why, he says "Well, shingles are scarce and you can't spank a boy with a tin roof."

She will be with us today, on the Main Floor, from 10 to 12 this morning and from 2 to 4 this afternoon.

budget authority of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, will be in the Thrift Shops to give you interesting and unusual information on how to spend your clothes money wisely and well. On the Third Floor from 10 to 12 and 2 to 4 today.

Masha Schatt,

Jean Abbey,
of the Woman's Home Companion staff, will be in the Teen-Age Shop with interesting tips for Teen Age girls today on the new and fascinating fashions for summer and with news about the Crown Tested fashions. On the Second Floor from 10 to 12 and 1:30 to 5:30.

Today makes history! We have always been keenly aware of the capabilities of women and The Hecht Co. is proud to give its women an outstanding opportunity to prove their ability. Today and tomorrow our men executives step aside to let the women show what they can do—in a history-making event! Not only have the women selected merchandise for the two days but they have priced it to offer values that will make other Washington women (and even the men) gasp.

In addition to outstanding merchandise, we have planned a program of unusual interest for you. Famous women of Washington in various fields have been most generous in lending themselves, their time and their work. We are inviting you to meet these career women in The Hecht Co. today and tomorrow and to view some of their achievements. Throughout the store there are exhibits of special interest, all dedicated to "Careers for Women." We believe that the women of The Hecht Co. are going to give the women of Washington a party that they'll long remember.

Unusual and Fascinating Features for WOMEN'S DAYS

★ For every woman guest today (at least the first 10,000!) a gift from famous cosmeticians and an interesting souvenir book of Women's Days—"Cavalcade of Career Women." Get your gifts as you enter the store.

★ A window of photograph portraits of famous women of Washington, created by Peggy Duffy, outstanding woman photographer.

★ An exhibition of sculpture by advanced women students from the Corcoran School of Art featuring work by Dorothy Chase Jones, Ruby Schuler Toy and Jane Austin.

★ These popular college girls will act as hostesses: Elinor Broughton and Lois Kuhn, of the Maryland University chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma; Edith Roe Sparling and Eleanor Quirk, of the Maryland University chapter of Alpha Omicron Pi; Virginia Webb and Sue Slater, of the George Washington University Chapter of Chi Omega; Mary Curry and Margaret Marsh, of the American University Chapter of Delta Gamma; Cecile Riodion, of Fairmont College; Patsy Morin and Ruth Quinn, of Trinity College. You'll know them by their Women's Day insignia.

★ A "Women in Government" window with a continuous motion picture showing "What's in a Dress," brought to us by the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

Certain types of men still like to cling to the legend that women in business are cute and amusing—and yet, as a matter of fact, you will find just the same percentages of efficient and inefficient members in any functioning group of people—be they male or female. And maybe one reason that women can do so many things at once without becoming confused or upset is because for generations they've minded all the pots on the fire, with a baby tucked under each arm!

Bab Lincoln,
Woman's Page Editor, The Washington Times.

We women are learning to do just just what we want to—and beneath it all, the men are liking it! We're finding out that if we're career-inclined, there's just as good a field in business as there is in the home—and we're doing a mighty fine job at those careers, too. We try out new ideas in hats—and we're not afraid to instigate new business ideas, either.

Virgila Stephens,
Woman's Page Editor, The Washington Herald.

Women are daily demonstrating their ability to perform and function in virtually every phase of business life. To consider a capable woman unfitted for the average business or professional career is to brand one as being far behind the times.

Malvina Lindsay,

That women have won their place in business and the professions is evidenced by the fact that even the most fuddy-duddy conservative no longer prates that "woman's place is in the home." Now a woman can, without making it a burning issue, choose whether she will have a career or a home and children. Indeed, it has been demonstrated so often that she can do both, that this rather super-human feat is taken for granted.

Betty Garnett,
Woman's Page Editor, Washington Daily News.
